GOP reformers look to Nixon for help

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — Republican reformers lost another round Thursday in their struggle to guarantee more delegate muscle for the large, urbanized states at the party's 1976 convention. It appeared that only an appeal to President Nixon might turn the tide in their favor.

The 156-member Republican National Committee upheld its smaller but equally conservative Rules Committee on successive votes rejecting the reform plan and dismissing attempts to liberalize the surviving delegate selection formula, which favors smaller, more conservative Southern and Western states.

"It is said this is a battle between big and small states," said one reformer, house minority leader Frederick Lippitt of Rhode Island. "Well, I stand here as a representative of the smallest state of all. We're here to present to the American people the best possible image of the party."

It is the GOP's "open door" image that the outnumbered reformers were believed ready to evoke in a private request for Nixon's help in broadening the national base of the party.

The eight largest states, which gave Nixon 52 per cent of his support in the 1968 election, account for only 37 per cent of the delegate strength at the convention opening Monday.

Although the President's personal position in the big-state-small-state battle was unclear, the conservative forces led by Sen. John G. Tower of Texas and Rep. Jack F. Kemp of New York have had the active support of GOP National Chairman Robert Dole — the President's chief political lieutenant — and the Committee for Re-Election of the President.

The reformers, while not willing to challenge Nixon publicly on the issue, were understood to be pinning their hopes on an appeal for Nixon's support in the interest of avoiding a politically damaging "sectional stance" in 1976, when Nixon's successor must build his own campaign.

Their chances of a successful challenge of the delegate selection formula on the convention floor were not favorable.

The amended Tower-Kemp plan approved by the National Committee would expand the total number of 1976 delegates but would leave the disproportionate voting power of smaller states pretty much unchanged. In addition, it retains the legally clouded feature of giving bonus votes to states which supported the GOP nominee in the last national election.

With Rep. Paul N. McCloskey of California, effectively silenced as the only potential floor challenger of Nixon's Vietnam policies, the party was ready to convene Monday for routine approval of a pro-Nixon campaign platform and renomination of the Nixon-Agnew ticket.

The tempo of antiwar activity in the streets picked up Thursday, marring only slightly the unruffled, somnolent mood of this hot, humid ocean playground.

The next round in the reform battle will come Sunday night, when the convention's Permanent Rules Committee meets to act on previous committee recommendations.

House adopts pay increase

Bulletin

HARRISBURG (UPI) — An embittered General Assembly Thursday night adopted a $2,500 across-the-board pay increase for all legislators, judges and top officials in the executive branch.

The proposal passed the House by a simple majority of 99-97 after more than three hours of emotional debate. It was approved by the Senate Wednesday night and does not need the governor's signature. Most of the debate centered on the criticism of the news media.

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The House laid the groundwork for a $2,500 annual pay increase Thursday by agreeing to reduce the size of the General Assembly.

The chamber argued late into the night on the money package, but most of the criticism was directed at the news media.

The Senate-passed measure would increase the legislative salary-expense package from $15,600 to $18,100. Judges and top executive officials also would get a $2,500 across-the-board hike.

Two amendments which would have given bigger increases to the judiciary and executive branches were voted down overwhelmingly.

"I consider myself equal to any judge in this Commonwealth," Majority Leader K. Leroy Ivis, D-Allegheny, said. "I will not vote to increase the pay of the executive branch and the judiciary and admit by my vote that the legislative branch is the step child of this government."

Many legislators blamed the news media for adverse public reaction to the increases. Rep. William Eckensberger, D-Lehigh, said he wanted the news reporters to disclose publicly their qualifications.

Rep. William Shane, D-Indiana, asked the reporters for United Press International and the Associated Press to stand in the press gallery. They were booed by the chamber.

"I resent having this august body being a teething ring for cub reporters," he said. He called the press gallery a "constellation of mediocrity."

The measure to reduce the size of the General Assembly passed 107-89. It was an about face for the House, which twice defeated the same proposal earlier this year. It was sent to the Senate for concurrence.

The House would be reduced from 203 to 161 members and the Senate from 50 to 40 under the proposal. It is a constitutional amendment, requiring the approval of two separate legislatures and the voters in a referendum. It would not become effective until 1976.

Most of the debate went against the bill. Rep. William Eckensberger, D-Lehigh, accused the members of passing it to "justify" their money increase.

"I don't think the people would quibble as much if we take a salary increase if they knew that we were trying to reform the system," Rep. Milton Berkes, D-Bucks, said.

Rep. John D. Murtha, D-Cambria, said the proposal would put the legislature at the mercy of special interest groups.

"Reducing the size of the legislature reduces the possibility for an ordinary citizen to be elected," Murtha said. "It can only result in more expenses because of the district he must cover."

"This will become an exclusive rich man's club," Rep. Harry Comer, D-Philadelphia, opposed the plan because he said it would require another reapportionment in 1976. The legislative districts were reapportioned this year.

The House defeated an amendment which its sponsor, Rep. John B. McCue, R-Armstrong, described as an "anti-gerrymandering" proposal.

House Majority Leader K. Leroy Ivis, D-Allegheny, predicted the "momentum" of the Senate approval would carry the money increase in the House.

Final antibusing vote delayed

Cross-town busing banned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted tentatively Thursday to prohibit cross-town busing of any student to achieve school desegregation and to allow reopening of past integration orders that do not comply with the ban.

The action came as the House neared expected passage of President Nixon's bill to establish various other integration options which courts would have to try before ordering busing.

Opponents of the legislation conceded defeat in advance of the final vote, but predicted the bill faced an uphill fight in the Senate.

The House approved an amendment by Rep. Edith Green, D-Ore., that would go beyond Nixon's proposal to limit busing — if ordered as a last resort — to the nearest or next closest school for elementary school pupils.

The Green amendment would limit busing of all pupils, through the 12th grade, to the next closest school, meaning no cross-town busing. The amendment passed on a 178-88 standing vote, but was subject to a possible later roll call vote.

The House then reinstated a provision in the Nixon bill which was struck out by the House Education and Labor Committee earlier this month. It would permit the reopening of all desegregation cases, no matter how old or whether they involved busing, to make them comply with the new measure.

Black members of the House and some white liberals angrily denounced the bill, claiming it put Congress on record in favor of segregated schools.

"The solution to this whole problem is for the House to instruct the Supreme Court to stop enforcing the 13th amendment and return us (blacks) to involuntary slavery," said Rep. William Clay, D-Mo.

Rep. Alphonzo Bell, R-Calif., also opposed reinstating the reopening provision for old desegregation orders. "If you want to start another rhabarb in this country, then vote for this; it will be a vote for a return to the era of the firebomb," he said.

Under the bill, courts would have to try several remedies to achieve integration before resorting to busing. Among these are assigning students to their neighborhood school, revision of attendance zones, permitting voluntary transfer by students, and construction of new schools or the closing of "inferior" schools. The measure authorizes $500 million a year for two years to improve schools.

Kissinger, Thieu to resume Vietnam War talks today

SAIGON (UPI) — Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger and South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met for more than two hours Thursday but details of their Vietnam War talks were cloaked in secrecy.

American officials said Thieu and Kissinger would meet again at the presidential palace today but refused to disclose what was discussed in the two hour and 15 minute session late Thursday afternoon.

Kissinger also held a series of meetings Thursday with Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker, U.S. troop commander Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, 7th Air Force commanding Gen. John W. Vogt and other American officials.

The meetings took place as the U.S. command announced intensified activity in the air war over North and South Vietnam with the clearing of weather which had sharply curtailed aerial operations for weeks.

Strategic B52 bombers joined tactical aircraft in almost 700 missions sweeping Vietnam as the struggle for Quang Tri continued with heavy Communist mortar and artillery attacks and scattered firefights.

The trip to Saigon by President Nixon's personal peace envoy generated excited speculation that a breakthrough had been made at the Paris peace talks, but the White House warned against expecting too much.

Kissinger refused to discuss his trip with newsmen but appeared jovial and at ease during the few opportunities reporters had to question him.

"I really won't talk," Kissinger told newsmen. "There is no sense in asking me questions."

Public reaction to the trip by the South Vietnamese government was quiet.

The official Vietnam Press announced the visit in a five paragraph story which noted his time of arrival, listed the names of aides accompanying the presidential adviser and said he would meet with Thieu "to review all aspects of the Vietnam issue including the Paris peace talks."

N. Viets say talks stalled

PARIS (UPI) — North Vietnam said Thursday there has been no progress toward a settlement either in private or public Vietnam talks, and the Viet Cong backed reports that President Nixon missed a chance to make peace early in 1969.

The Hanoi spokesman said President Nixon currently was "trying to make it look as if there is progress" in private negotiations.

The Communist statements came during and after Thursday's 155th session of the deadlocked Vietnam peace conference at the former Majestic Hotel.

The semipublic talks began around the time President Nixon was inaugurated in January, 1969, after the stage was set by six months of preliminary negotiations between Hanoi and the Johnson administration.

Nguyen Thanh Le, official spokesman of the Hanoi delegation, said in response to newsmen's questions at a post session briefing Thursday:

"There has been no progress either in private or public talks, and at the same time President Nixon is intensifying the bombing" of North Vietnam.

Le's remarks came four days after the third private meeting in Paris in less than a month between President Nixon's foreign affairs advisor, Henry A. Kissinger, and Hanoi Politburo member Le Duc Tho.

Busing at issue

Court upholds HRC power

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Commonwealth Court ruled Thursday the Human Relations Commission (HRC) can order the busing of children to eliminate de facto segregation in schools in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and three other Pennsylvania communities.

In a 6-1 decision, the court upheld rulings by the HRC that segregation exists in the two city school districts and in the Uniontown, New Castle, and New Kensington — Arnold districts.

Judge Glenn E. Mencer dissented, saying the commission had failed to prove de facto segregation.

In the majority opinion, Judge Roy Wilkinson said earlier court rulings give the commission the authority to order school desegregation where de facto segregation exists.

Wilkinson said the criteria used by the commission in determining the existence of de facto segregation were proper.

He also dismissed complaints by the school districts that desegregation would be too expensive.

"Without minimizing any of the many difficult problems presented to the Human Relations Commission and the school districts in all of these cases," Wilkinson wrote, "the big problem is related to busing — who is to decide when and how to bus school children from their 'neighborhood schools.'"

Wilkinson said the state Supreme Court had already decided busing was legal.

Automakers refuse to cut price request for '73 cars

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. and Chrysler Corp. joined American Motors Thursday in refusing Nixon administration pressure to cut back price increase requests on 1973 models to recover the cost of adding anti-pollution and safety hardware.

GM Chairman Richard C. Gerstenberg sent a letter to Donald Rumsfeld, director of the President's Cost of Living Council, saying "there is a serious question of principle involved in your request that General Motors withdraw its requested price increases.

"Moreover, we are concerned with the precedent that might be established. In the months and years immediately ahead, governmental standards already published will require the addition of numerous and costly items of equipment to every vehicle," Gerstenberg said.

Chrysler Chairman Lynn A. Townsend sent a telegram to Rumsfeld, saying Chrysler's price hike request was well within federal guidelines and has been documented.

While GM refused to reduce its request for higher prices for federally required safety and pollution control equipment, the giant automaker agreed to defer for the time being a request for $31 per car for non-required changes.

Gerstenberg's letter echoed another telegram sent by Townsend on Wednesday, in which the Chrysler chief charged that the auto industry had been singled out for administrative pressure.

"We believe the workings of our economy are endangered when one agency of government can establish standards that a manufacturer's product must meet, and another agency should seek to prevent the same manufacturer from having at least an opportunity to recover the costs of such mandated equipment in the market place under competitive conditions," Gerstenberg said.

Gerstenberg said GM is "reducing our requested increase of $85 for an average equipped vehicle by $31, leaving a minimum increase of $54, related entirely to government mandated changes in emissions, bumpers and other safety equipment on our vehicles."

Wednesday was unique for the coast of southern Oregon and northern California in summer.

At Brookings and at Crescent City, Calif., wives of fishermen stood vigil along the beaches looking for their "husbands' boats."

The three missing and presumed lost were from the same boats were Mrs. Friend's husband, Don, their 12-year-old son and Don Higgins.

Morocco's defense minister kills himself

RABAT (UPI)—Defense Minister Mohamed Oufkir, the second most powerful figure in Morocco, committed suicide early Thursday in self reproach over Wednesday's assassination attempt against King Hassan II by dissident military forces, Moroccan authorities disclosed.

A government communique said that conditions in the Arab kingdom following the coup attempt had returned to normal by midday Thursday. An official spokesman said a "number of dissident officers" were arrested after a two-hour battle at the Kenitra base between loyal and rebel forces with an unknown number of casualties.

Officials said the 43-year-old Hassan was "in a safe place," but declined to say whether he was inside his Rabat palace or at the summer palace in Skhirat. It was the second attempt to kill Hassan in 13 months.

Hassan escaped unhurt but official reports said eight persons were killed and 47 injured in the coup attempt by rebel pilots who first tried to shoot Hassan's plane down and then strafed the airport building and grounds.

Official silence shrouded details of Oufkir's suicide, but Moroccan authorities privately said he shot himself in the head at 12:30 a.m. in shame over his failure to prevent the assassination attempt against the king.

Official sources denied reports circulating in diplomatic circles in Paris that he had been put to death for implication in the assassination attempt.

Code of conduct revised

ABA wants lighter dope penalties

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The American Bar Association concluded its 95th convention Thursday with adoption of a watered-down resolution calling for an end to "excessive criminal penalties" for use of marijuana.

A resolution to this effect was adopted by the ABA's policymaking House of Delegates, which retreated from the idea of repealing marijuana laws outright or regulating distribution of the drug through licensing.

Attendance at the annual gathering reached an all time high of 9,000. Leon Jaworski of Houston, Tex., turned over the presidency to Robert W. Meserve of Boston. The president-elect, who will take office when the association meets in Washington D.C. next summer, is Chesterfield Smith of Lakeland, Fla.

Earlier, the House of Delegates adopted a sweeping new code of conduct to govern the behavior of the nation's 15,000 judges. Replacing canons that have been in effect since 1924 it requires judges to report money they receive for offbench activities but allows them privacy in their investments.

The resolution was offered by the ABA's section on Individual Rights and Responsibilities.

Acting on another resolution by the same section, the delegates called for a nondiscrimination in the hiring and promotion of women lawyers and urged law schools to deny placement facilities to firms which discriminate.

In other actions the delegates: —Adopted modified no fault insurance for automobile accident victims under which all policies would pay up to $2,000 in benefits without regard to who caused the accident.

—Endorsed creation of machinery for removal of unfit state and federal judges.

—Called for the United States and the Soviet Union to agree on further measures limiting strategic offensive arms

—Urged repeal of a federal law allowing importation of chrome and other materials from Rhodesia in contravention of United

House okays constitutional flood relief amendment

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The House unanimously approved an emergency amendment to the state Constitution Thursday which would allow the state to loan money directly to flood victims.

The bill was among six flood-related measures which were approved by the legislature.

The new constitutional amendment would give the state the power to give tax rebates, credits, exemptions, grants in aid or special supplements to individuals, corporations, associations or nonprofit institutions which were affected by the floods in 1971 and 1972.

If approved by the Senate, it will appear on the ballot Nov. 9. Normally, constitutional amendments must be passed by two legislatures, but under emergency procedures they can be approved by one.

The Senate Thursday voted 43-0 on a bill that would forgive local property taxes to persons who suffered more than 10 per cent damage in the flood. It was sent to the House.

The Senate also adopted a House-passed resolution calling on Congress to assume the unemployment compensation costs of workers who were left jobless by the flood.

The resolution asked congress to reimburse the state fund and make certain that companies who were hurt by the flood do not fall into a higher unemployment compensation tax bracket next year.

The House voted 197-0 to reimburse all volunteer fire, rescue and ambulance companies for any flood-related losses.

It also approved legislation permitting local industrial and commercial development authorities to sponsor disaster relief projects.

The local authorities could add the flood relief projects to existing projects or create special ones up to Jan. 1, 1973.

The fourth bill approved by the House would give any owners of flood-damaged property the pre-flood value on their homes if the land were taken for a highway project.

All of the bills passed by the House were sent to the Senate.

Storm school damage totals $64.4 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal education officials reported Thursday that Tropical Storm Agnes, in its march up the eastern seaboard in June, caused $64.4 million in estimated damage to 650 schools and colleges.

Spokesmen for the U. S. Office of Education said, however, efforts were under way to provide federal money to repair the damage quickly with a minimum of red tape.

Already, they said, the agency has paid out $23.3 million to school districts in five states to repair or rebuild buildings, buy temporary mobile classrooms or cover increased school costs resulting from the flooding that accompanied the storm.

Scientists find new method for producing food crops

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Raising the possibility of brand new food crops for a hungry world, scientists reported their first success Thursday in growing a mature and fertile plant from genetic cells of different parentage.

Their achievement at mating the cells in a test tube also presents the potential for developing crops so resistant to disease and pests that chemical protection would no longer be needed.

The new method of producing plants specially tailored to the needs of man was developed by research biologists of the atomic energy commission's Brookhaven National Laboratory at Upton, N.Y.

The Brookhaven hybrid "is extremely significant to agriculture," the report said "because it represents the potential for genetically developing totally new crop species or the modification of existing species having improved yield and resistance to disease and insects."

"For example," the report said, "one can imagine that it may be possible to devise plants which produce edible food above ground and an edible root below ground. This could cause our present concepts of world food production to be changed markedly."

In theory, hybrid animals of different ancestral species, from mice to men, could be similarly developed.

But, a Brookhaven spokesman said, this would be "a tremendously more complicated" undertaking. It may be accomplished "some day" but that day may be far off.

Nevertheless, what the Brookhaven scientists have done is, he said, "the equivalent in the plant world of the same thing in the world of mammals."

The technique of uniting desired plant traits at the cell level is called paraxial hybridization to distinguish it from standard methods which involve cross-pollination of mature plants. It is the culmination of research at Brookhaven and in Japan and England.

It is "the first known case," the Brookhaven lab reported, "where an entire organism of any higher order of life has been produced by combining two different species in this way."

The Brookhaven biologists are Dr. Peter S. Carlson, Dr. Harold H. Smith, and Rosemarie D. Dearing. They produced a flourishing tobacco plant hybrid by fusing, or merging, the genetic cells of two different species and nursing the cells through subsequent growth stages to maturity.

The new technique circumvents these "natural barriers to intergeneric reproduction." The tobacco plant of mixed ancestry grown at Brookhaven is fertile and capable of reproducing its own genetically improved kind.

Spassky 'checks' out of match

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — Boris Spassky and Bobby Fischer Thursday night adjourned the 15th game of their world chess championship with the titleholder's king in check after 40 moves.

Fischer, two pawns down but holding better position on the board, put Spassky in check with his queen and then waited four minutes for the Russian to study the board. Finally, with his clock expired, Spassky went backstage to write and seal his 41st move.

Most grandmasters predicted a draw but others cautioned that Fischer was still in good attacking position and had gained superior position in exchange for the two-pawn disadvantage at adjournment.

Northampton Court to fill seat on supervisor board

EASTON — The Northampton County Court is expected to decide on Monday which of the five applicants will fill a vacant seat on the Lower Mount Bethel Township Board of Supervisors. The public hearing is set for 11:30 a.m.

During the special hearing, the county court judges will hear testimony from each of the applicants and two character witnesses for each of the five interested persons.

Township solicitor William C. Cassebaum is expected to conduct the questioning of the prospective supervisors.

The vacancy on the township board has existed since June 12 when Adam Piergallini's resignation from the post became effective.

Following the acceptance of his resignation, the remaining supervisors, Richard Grucela and Philip Sabatine, could not agree on his replacement within the 30-day limit as set by law.

Upon failing to reach agreement in the matter, the case automatically was placed in the hands of the county court judges.

Whoever is appointed by the court will serve the balance of Piergallini's term which expires on Dec. 31, 1975.

Seeking the vacant post are Alfred Q. Capecci, Jr., of Martins Creek; Ronald Garis of Bangor R.D. 2; Floyd Mensch, of Richmond-Belvidere Road, Bangor; Tony Plebani, of Bangor R.D. 3; and Elwood Savitz, of Bangor R.D. 1.

One of the primary rulings expected from the court prior to the hearing will be whether all five men have fulfilled the requirements for their applications.

To apply for the vacant seat, each man was required to file a petition with the county court with the signature of at least one supervisor and five registered voters in the township.

Savitz and Capecci are the only two applicants who have met that requirement.

Savitz, 24, an employee of the township, has had his petition signed by Sabatine. He is also a former supervisor and has served as chairman of the board. In the November election he was defeated by Grucela.

Grucela has signed the petition submitted by Capecci, who is the township tax assessor and a teacher at the Easton Area High School.

At a special meeting held on June 26 to fill the vacant seat, Sabatine nominated Savitz, but Grucela refused to second the motion, causing the motion to die. Grucela then nominated Capecci, but Sabatine refused to second that move.

Should Garis, Plebani and Mensch be declared ineligible for the post because of failing to fulfill the necessary requirements, the court will be faced with the decision of appointing one of the two men who were previously turned down.

Rules set for entries at fair

BANGOR — Officials for the Blue Valley Farm Show, scheduled for Aug. 22-26 at the farm show grounds, Bangor-Pen Argyl Highway, have announced new regulations.

Each exhibitor will be required to first report to the main auditorium and obtain a fair entry blank for each department and division he desires to enter.

Officials urge all exhibitors to record the exhibit number because this is the number used in computing awards checks.

After the entry blank is obtained, it must be filled out listing the department, division, section, class and article or animal which is being entered.

The entry blank and project should then be registered at the proper exhibitor booth where a claim check will be issued.

The schedule for placing of exhibits on opening day is as follows:

High School home economics exhibits, 4-H homemaking exhibits and adult home and dairy products, from 1:30 to 4 p.m. and from 7 to 9 p.m.; industrial arts projects, from 7 to 9 p.m.; and open class dairy cattle, up to 9 p.m.

From 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, the following should be entered: Floral exhibits; adult vegetable exhibits; and 4-H and Future Farmers of America vegetable exhibits.

Fair officials also announced FFA and 4-H dairy cattle must be placed by 9 p.m.

Pike officials announce change

Voter sign-up extended

MILFORD — Pike County Commissioners have announced the county voter registration rolls will not close until the end of the regular business day at the courthouse on Oct. 10.

Commissioners said because the later closing date for registration will make it impossible for the county to prepare complete voter lists until just prior to the November election, a regular list and a supplemental list will be prepared.

A spokesman said the regular list will include all persons who have registered as of Sept. 18, while the supplemental list will contain names of persons registering between Sept. 18 and Oct. 10.

The county officials also announced field registration will be held in Pike County on Sept. 9 and Sept. 16.

Field registration times, dates and places are as follows:

Green Township — 1 to 4 p.m., Sept. 9 at the Greentown Post Office.

Pleasant Valley senior 'trips out' on 4-H activities

West End Bureau

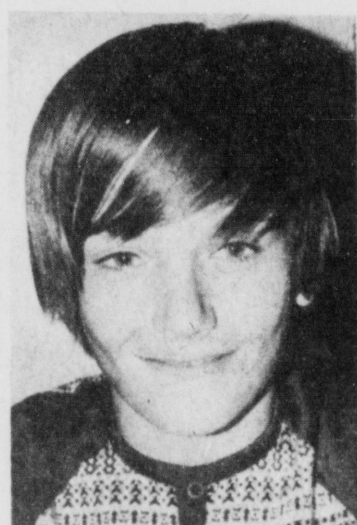

SCIOTA — One 16-year-old gadfly has become quite a traveler in the last few months and to boot, he's seen President Nixon personally, had breakfast with Gov. Milton Shapp and met with Rep. Fred Rooney.

Representing the Neola Colts and Philly 4-H Club, Danny Seidof, got to talk to the three politicians during his recent 4-H trips to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania State University, and Washington, D.C.

Danny, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Seidof of Sciota, returned this week from Washington D.C., where he participated in a citizenship course at the national 4-H center.

"I really learned a lot at the convention, even though they worked us hard from 6 a.m. to 12 midnight," said the Pleasant Valley High School senior, who has been a 4-H member for seven years.

"They really got a lot across to me," he continued.

Danny Seidof

"I learned I shouldn't be afraid of what people think. I should do what I want to do and show them my way of thinking."

One of 26 4-H members from Pennsylvania to take part in the week-long session, Danny was selected to be on the assembly committee representing the state of Penn-

4-H'ers attend state event

STROUDSBURG — Four 4-H Club members from Monroe County took part in Pennsylvania State 4-H Days held last week on the Pennsylvania State University Campus.

Members of the Neola Colts and Fillies 4-H Club, Sherry Snyder of R.D. 1, Saylorsburg; Jo Anne Valinote of Sciota; Barbara Eckman of Effort; and Danny Seidof of Sciota, were among over 1,200 other 4-H'ers attending from throughout the Commonwealth.

Competing as a horse judging team, the 4-H participants judged several breeds of horses and were graded by professional judges on their oral responses. A written examination tested their abilities in other areas of horse breeding and showmanship.

The Monroe County horse judging team placed 18 out of 44 judging teams. Sherry Snyder was awarded a ribbon for ranking 17 highest individual of 156 participants.

4-H State Days are sponsored and coordinated by the Pennsylvania State Extension Service in cooperation with the Monroe County Extension Office as an educational event.

Council, Lions to pay costs

Street sign pact okayed

EAST BANGOR — The East Bangor Borough has approved a proposal with a firm to furnish new street signs for the borough.

However, the agreement will receive final approval only after the number of signs have been determined and what share of the cost will be assumed by the East Bangor Lions Club.

The firm which offered the proposal is the Chemung Corp., of Elmira, N.Y.

The firm's initial estimate indicated 70 signs would be needed at a cost of $935. However, councilmembers called for 15 more signs before the matter was turned over to Gordon Wilson, the borough engineer.

Council named John Row, Daniel Hess and Shirley Rowe to a committee which will meet with Lions Club representatives to discuss the costs which will be borne by council and the club.

In another matter, councilmen expressed agreement that letters sent to parents of children operating minibikes has been successful in helping to curtail the illegal use of the vehicles.

For several months council had received numerous complaints about minors riding the bikes illegally in the borough.

In other business, council discussed the problem that the borough has been facing in the collection of the full $25 per annual garbage collection assessment.

Council said several persons residing in the borough for less than a year have been making partial payments which is in violation of council's ruling against partial billing.

Council announced the resignation of James Hamm from the borough's park board. Gaylord A. Weidick was appointed by council to complete Hamm's term in office.

Truth can hurt but help, too

Truth is such a scarce commodity. And that's not too hard to understand. Because truth can hurt.

Take this business over whether or not those North Vietnamese dikes really are being bombed by U.S. planes. The Pentagon says "No!" Hanoi says "Yes!"

Who are we to believe? As loyal Americans, we should be inclined to favor the reports handed out by our government. But that government has been caught in so many untruths and half-truths in recent years that unquestioning belief is hard to swallow.

On the other hand, communist governments never have been known as paragons of truth. In fact, their very ideology insists that the end justifies the means, whether those means include lying or not. (Sometimes, it seems, the U.S. government practices the same philosophy — witness the half-truths told to win the Senate's concurrence on the Gulf of Tonkin resolution that led to our massive escalation of the Vietnam conflict.)

There are hints, though. Of those outsiders who have been allowed to visit North Vietnam and see the dike "damage" in person, none have been remotely unfriendly to the Hanoi cause. Ramsey Clark is an aggressive dove; so is actress Jane Fonda and so are the many anti-war leaders who have paid calls to Hanoi.

Their reports tend to be largely uncritical. A seasoned and objective newsman, for example, would certainly want to see more than the few bombed sites to which Clark and Fonda et al were escorted. He would want to talk to many more than the few prisoners of war with whom administration critics have talked.

On the other hand, Pentagon officials have not been exactly open-handed with reconnaissance photos of the dike areas nor with combat reports on bombing sorties. They have rebuffed many a reporter seeking those items.

So we are back to our original premise, that a healthy dose of truth would do wonders to clear the air of charges surrounding this unfortunate war and bridge a good part of the credibility gap.

Unfortunately, telling the truth often means admitting you have made mistakes or done despicable things, and neither people nor nations are ever too anxious to do that.

Inconsiderate Agnes

How inconsiderate for Tropical Storm Agnes to have flooded out a good part of Pennsylvania in an election year!

No public official can now travel to the devastated areas and commiserate with the afflicted without having charges of "politics!" hurled in his face if he is an office seeker, or charges of "incompetence!" if he is an incumbent or member of the administration in power.

That does nasty things to the ego. It also does nasty things to a man's popularity with the voters. And all because the stupid storm didn't have the sense to come in 1971 or 1973!

It seems that way, at least, as long as you judge by the actions of federal Housing Secretary George Romney and Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

Shapp, of course, is understandably upset over the damage done by Agnes. And he is right to be angered by the jungle of red tape supplicants must wrestle before they can receive the money they need to get back on their feet.

Romney, however, has no real excuse for his absurd reaction to gubernatorial criticism of federal efforts to help flood victims. Much of that criticism is justified. And just possibly some good could be done by President Nixon visiting the devastated areas of Wilkes-Barre and Harrisburg, to mention just two.

But Romney's warning to Nixon to "beware of the Shapp trap" is purely political. At least Shapp's anger, which Romney termed political in nature, is justified by Shapp's real concern for Agnes' victims. Romney's concern is prompted purely by the desire to have his boss avoid potential embarrassment in an election year.

Our feeling is, if the criticism and embarrassment is justified, then let it fly.

The President would do well to submit to it, and then turn his anger on that monolithic, idiotic bureaucracy down in Washington that is more concerned with proper forms (in sextuplicate) than with the real sufferings of those whose only fault was in living in the path of the worst storm to ever lash this nation.

The Pennsylvania Story

Financing woes

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's political strategists are up to their ears in woes in this presidential election year 1972, not only faced with the chore of trying to swing the Keystone State to their respective party — but alas and alack, trying to find the cash to do the job!

Financing campaigns in a gubernatorial election year is a pain in the ballot box; a presidential election year, which in itself is bad enough, can be a scorcher too, as was the case in presidential 1968 — and is currently the case in this year's presidential.

The problem of financing is one of those nettling items no one likes to bother with — and yet, if there's going to be a campaign, it has to be financed.

Big stuff

It's big stuff today in Pennsylvania and in major campaigns such as this year's tally-and-tea standoff the overall cost for each party will well exceed the million-dollar mark — quite handsily!

It is true the $10 to $100-a-plate campaign fund raising dinners held throughout the hustings and the big $100-a-plate dinners here in the Capitol City provide the backbone for much of the effort in filling party coffers.

But even these somewhat lavish affairs do not solve the problem completely by any means.

For example, while $100-a-plate munch sessions will be scheduled by Pennsylvania Democrats and Republicans hopefully with some sort of stellar Washingtonians on the podium — which will produce an estimated half-million-dollars for each — it can readily be seen that it's going to take considerably more than famous headgear to really bring in the snap, crackle and pop of heavy campaign folding money.

Fears not funny

No branch of medicine has sustained the ridicule accorded to psychiatry. Jokes abound everywhere; even analysts laugh at them. This is traceable to the truth that, in other times, the village idiot was the butt of amused contempt. His head wasn't screwed on tight enough. He was missing a few buttons. He was the only school dropout in kindergarten.

Well, Senator Thomas Eagleton has brought the matter of human intellect, human emotion and human behavior into grim focus. Average citizens everywhere may wish to know more about this most inexact science. It was Broadway and Hollywood that first adopted the so-called shrink.

Well-known stars bragged that they spent an hour a week on the couch. At one party, when I was asked the question and said that no, I did not have a psychiatrist, my friends were sure that something was wrong with me. Woody Allen boasts that he has been on the couch so long that he may never get off.

Most are not nuts

Most patients who use the services of an analyst or psychiatrist are not "nuts." The vast majority are neurotics possessed by an assortment of fears. The woman who fears to get on an elevator is not afraid of an elevator; her mind is using the elevator to hide a deeper fear.

Conversely, anyone who hasn't an assortment of fears is — believe me — the true nut. Some fears are of such horrifying magnitude that the patient retreats into silence, into a serene world he fashions for himself. He is difficult to cure because he doesn't want to leave the sweet, sunny world he has manufactured for the harsh, cruel one he left.

Among my friends is a psychiatrist who grew up in Philadelphia, the son of a pharmacist. His name is Dr. Lester Keiser, and we spend time around the dining room table hacking out solemn subjects like politics, the Miami Dolphins, Women's Lib, and the high cost of sending children to college. We never discuss psychiatry because he knows that, as far as his friend him is concerned, it's much too late.

Keystone State Republicans in this presidential election year will not have the "prestige" of state payrollers behind their suggestions for purchase of the $100 tickets. It will be strictly a voluntary affair — and the volunteers in Republican ranks have thinned considerably.

For their counterparts on the Democratic side of the swamp, affairs fiscal are looking up, and while they have indeed taken over Capitol Hill once again, they are by no means in the well-oiled position Democratic kingpins would like to see them — not yet, at least.

Tossed in path

Added to this is the overall "complication" tossed in the path of the political old pros by former Governor Scranton who during his sojourn stepped up the list of civil service "untouchables" plus evidencing a well known reluctance to countenance the GOP fiscal touch of yore on state payrollers in general.

From the standpoint of cash in the proverbial sock, Pennsylvania Democrats still are in shaky shape. True they have in their till a modest grouping of petty cash farthings from their more affluent and prosperous days of a few years ago when they were in the saddle on Capitol Hill, but they need funds badly for this year's campaign wars.

For Keystone State elephant riders the story is little different. By the time they got through losing eight years of political battles, they were in hock up to their scuppers. Since the Scrantonian success of 1962 the debt was liquidated — but considerably more is needed now.

Thus at this point both parties have rough roads to travel on the financial rails ere a new president, State Legislature and what not are elected this fall.

This world was always difficult for those who seek security. Now it is tougher and more complex. The strain on the emotions increases. One of every three marriages fails. One of every three families is on the edge of starvation. The industrial complex tells its young executives that they are only as good as their most recent achievement.

Fear? It has become impossible to live without it. You may stifle fear, but it perches on your shoulder when the lights are out and sleep will not come. Psychiatry treats everything from fingernail biters on up to old ladies who insist they are getting shortwave messages from the FBI through their bridgework.

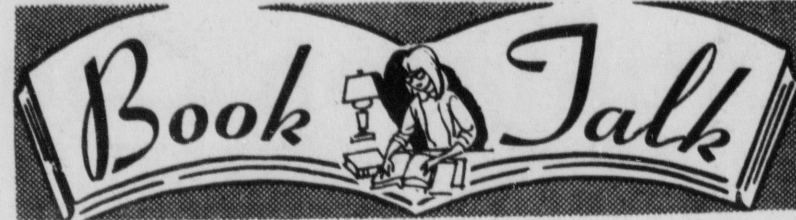

It isn't a fun subject. It's the broken leg of the mind, and it requires the crutch of psychiatry until the patient can walk alone. The true psychotic is not always easy to discern. Albert Fish of Gramercy Park was one of the sweetest, most self-effacing old men I ever met. He killed little girls, pickled them in brine, and ate them.

My feeling is that Senator Eagleton was neurotic. I have nothing to support it, but when the political explosion occurred, he won my sympathy. My first thought was: What will the seven million Americans who have had some form of psychological treatment think? Have we disqualified all of them?

It is no secret that President Richard Nixon used the services of a psychotherapist in New York named Arnold Hutschnecker. I do not presume to know the President's emotional problems, but I accord him the same high mark for seeking help that I give to Tom Eagleton.

Untying mental knots

We do not know how many ranking Senators, Congressmen, Cabinet ministers and top-flight industrialists are under treatment because psychiatry is regarded as the secret posh cell of the insane. Ever watch an old fisherman untying knots in a big net? The human mind is a huge complex net. The psychiatrist works at untying small knots as well as big tangles.

Plausible biting satire

The End of the Dream, by Philip Wylie.
(Doubleday, $5.95)

The world is less than half a century away from self-inflicted Armageddon. This is the message of Philip Wylie's posthumous novel, a curious mixture of shockingly plausible situations and biting satire.

The book opens in 2023 A.D. The story is told largely by Will Gulliver, a top executive of the Foundation for Human Conservancy.

This organization was launched in the 1970s by a man who foresaw world destruction in the unending demands of the public for material comforts at the expense of the environment.

Flashbacks describing the results include: A supersonic transport plane crashes into a highrise Manhattan apartment house during a power failure and record blizzard.

—A widow in rural Nebraska procrastinates about reporting a strange growth in her one-acre pond until the green slime has spread to and destroyed vital streams, lakes and rivers.

—Government and industry conspire to keep the public from knowing that an atomic power program is rapidly destroying water sources.

Any of this could happen. And therein lies the strength of Wylie's novel.

Its weaknesses — for this reviewer — are in the unrelieved recital of disasters and satirical situations — such as the senatorial candidate who lost the polls but won the election following his television lovemaking appearance with his wife.

Nazi killing well told

Assassination in Vienna, by Walter B. Maass. (Scribner's, $7.95)

This short book tells the story of the July 25, 1934, Nazi killing of Austria's Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss. It is a squalid tale well told.

Dollfuss was a tiny fellow and the hero of Austria's "black" conservatives for using army artillery to smash working class housing projects and crush "red" socialist forces.

He was 40, a nationalist and scared of Adolf Hitler, then rising in next door Germany. Dollfuss became a swimming pal of Italy's Benito Mussolini, seeking protection.

Nazi plotters tried their 1934 coup and failed. But Dollfuss was shot to death in the failure. Maass gives us the you-are-there approach, the detailed stories of witnesses and participants.

He examines various theories and, as a good historian, admits he lacked evidence to iron out all the wrinkles, such as how great a role did Adolf play in saying Engelbert must die.

In any case, Hitler had his way; four years after the Dollfuss death the Nazis seized Austria.

Judy Garland story cloying

Weep No More My Lady, by Mickey Deans and Ann Pinchot. (Hawthorn, $6.95).

Weep No More My Lady is a sentimental and rather cloying account of the life of the late Judy Garland by her fifth — and last — husband.

Deans pictures the singer as a "sick, scared, guilt-ridden, immature small girl" who was sadly misunderstood but who "gained strength as my wife."

Deans' book is a bit too glowing about

Deans but he is to be credited for not knocking the unpredictable Garland as other writers have done.

But does he present the "real" Judy Garland? Only those closest to her can say and, except for Deans and Mel Torme, who was part of her television series, none has yet jumped on the publicity-seeking bandwagon to write books about "My Life with Judy Garland."

Merry-go-round

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — An astonishing number of sticky-fingered officers have been caught shoplifting from military PXs. The alleged culprits include the Pentagon general in charge of "war gaming" and, believe it or not, the top Jewish chaplain in the Air Force.

In almost every case, the arrests were hushed up to protect the brass. We have obtained the military arrest records, however, for the 12-state region from Maine to Virginia.

These amazing documents accuse dozens of high-ranking officers of snatching merchandise ranging from a $41.50 sports coat to a $1.70 pair of pliers.

We were so startled over these shoplifting charges that we consulted the American Psychiatric Association for an explanation. Why, we asked, would prominent people filch petty items that they could easily afford to purchase?

Most likely, they had "an emotional maladaptation during childhood," that "seeks revenge during later years on society in general," suggested the psychiatrists.

Perhaps the most audacious theft was allegedly attempted by Brig. Gen. Harold Strack, who is in charge of "war gaming" for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the pinnacle command and structure at the Pentagon.

The arrest record states that Strack entered the Fort Myer PX on May 31, tried on a sports coat, liked the fit, cut off the price tag and departed the store without paying.

He was about to make a fast getaway when he was apprehended by a security inspector who told us he had witnessed the entire episode. Relate the documents in the case:

Pulls rank

'His (Strack's) wife was waiting for him at the curb in the car. . . . I (the security inspector) confronted him . . . and asked to see his identification card. He stated, you think that I am trying to steal this coat. . . .

"I then asked him to come to the manager's office, which he did, and stated, I am a General, and if you all are trying to make something out of this, I will fight it."

We tried for four days to reach Strack, leaving several messages at his office. He has declined to return our calls.

Another arrest record charges that Col. Kalman Levitan, highest ranking Jewish chaplain in the Air Force, snatched $9.85 worth of pliers, drill bits and a cord connector from the Bolling Air Force Base PX on June 21.

The document states that a security inspector "observed subject (Levitan) remove the items from a display and conceal the drill bit and cord connector in his right rain coat pocket, and the pliers in his left rain coat pocket."

Chaplain Levitan told us simply that "the incident speaks for itself," however, an attempt was made to cover up the whole affair. It wasn't reported to headquarters until more than a month had elapsed.

One of the most fascinating cases involved a high-ranking reserve officer, who happens to be a vice president of one of New York's largest banks. He claimed he had been "exonerated" and pleaded he would lose his job if we mentioned his name.

Although his case looks to us like a whitewash, we will give him the benefit of the doubt and withhold his name.

States the arrest record: "Subject removed 8 wrenches from a display and concealed them in his left coat pocket. Subject removed the larger of the wrenches . . . and concealed it in an inside coat pocket."

"He then removed 5 pairs of pliers from the display and concealed them in his right coat pocket. Subject also removed 1 Power Lock Rule Tape Measure from the display and concealed in his right coat pocket."

The alleged thief told us he placed the $28.10 worth of merchandise in his raincoat because "otherwise it would fall through the wire meshing of my shopping cart." He paid $114.99 for other goods but walked off with the concealed items without paying, he said, because they "completely slipped mind."

Apprehended by a security officer, the alleged shoplifter turned in the merchandise at the manager's office and then purchased the items the next day.

He told us he was exonerated by Col. Duane Erickson, the Bolling Air Force Base commander, who used a unique method to determine his innocence. The colonel said he stashed $28.10 worth of similar hardware in his own uniform to see if anyone could walk out of the store absentmindedly without paying.

We pointed out that the alleged shoplifter was wearing a raincoat. Erickson then changed his story and said he had stuffed the hardware in both his raincoat and military blouse. On the basis of this extra-judicial experiment, the colonel confirmed, he recommended that the bank executive be exonerated.

Footnote: What compounds the wrongdoing in these shoplifting cases is that the officers were allegedly stealing from their own troops. Profits from the PX system go directly to a welfare and recreation fund for the purchase of sports equipment and other items for GIs.

Thumbs down

Gladiatorial contests were a form of public amusement in ancient Rome. These contests, held in arenas and attended by thousands of spectators, got their name from the fact that gladiators, or swordsmen, fought in them.

A seriously wounded gladiator had the privilege of holding up his hand, which was a signal for the spectators to decide whether he should live or be slain by his opponent. If the spectators held their thumbs up, his life was spared; but, if they turned their thumbs down, he was killed.

This custom gave rise to two current expressions, "thumbs up" and "thumbs down" — the former meaning approval or pleasure, and the latter meaning disapproval.

Housing, bridge repairs remain serious problems

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Temporary housing, bridge replacement and the location of classrooms remain serious problems for areas of New York and Pennsylvania hit by Tropical Storm Agnes in June, a federal report showed Thursday.

"The elderly in this disaster seem to have had unusual difficulties in finding another home to go to while waiting for temporary housing," said G. A. Lincoln, director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness. "Many needed special care."

President Nixon dispatched aides to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., last weekend to attempt to cut through the redtape which has delayed federal aid to the area. In a report to Nixon entitled

"Progress on Recovery from Tropical Storm Agnes," Lincoln said elderly were being housed at a junior college in Wilkes-Barre where nursing care is being provided. A special trailer group was provided at Kingston, N.Y.

The report concluded that recovery was slow but progress was being made.

"Bridge replacement is the only significant highway problem remaining," the report said. More than 1,200 bridges were destroyed or damaged by Agnes in the seven-state area where the storm hit, mostly in New York and Pennsylvania.

The two states have assured the federal government that schooling will be available to all public school children when schools open in late September.

"Double sessions may be necessary at some locations," the report said.

Lincoln concluded: "Federal-state-local teamwork is excellent in the seven-state area. The one remaining critical short-term recovery problem is temporary housing, which will be surmounted in two or three weeks, providing there is not a significant rainy spell slowing the construction of trailer parks."

Flood costs Bell millions

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Bell Telephone Co. said Thursday it has already spent $13 million and it will take $17 million more and another five months to fully restore service in Pennsylvania areas struck by tropical storm Agnes.

Walter Fischer Jr., Bell assistant vice president, said the utility faces a "long, arduous job in getting service back to what it was before the floods" struck last June 23.

Fischer said $8 million worth of equipment, including 100,000 telephones, was lost or cannot be salvaged. He said some 200,000 telephone lines were knocked out of service.

The Bell official said "much of our service has been restored" but that it would take at least until the end of December before the restoration job is complete.

He said a force of 500 Bell workers are in the Wyoming Valley area now working to restore full service to some 3,200 telephone customers.

Bell said he expected installation work to increase greatly as families in the Wilkes-Barre area move into mobile homes provided by the government as temporary shelters.

Boyle must show financial status

WASHINGTON (UPI)—United Mine Workers (UMW) President W.A. "Tony" Boyle has been ordered to appear in federal court here Aug. 25 to answer question about his financial worth in order that a judge can determine how much he should pay in damages to the heirs of murdered Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski.

Federal Judge Howard F. Corcoran set Boyle's court appearance after ruling that Boyle was liable for punitive and compensatory damages for firing Yablonski from his UMW job as acting director of the union's lobbying arm.

Corcoran said Boyle's action against Yablonski during their bitter 1969 UMW election campaign was "retributive." The judge said Boyle's action was "taken spitefully and with malice."

Less than a month after the 1969 UMW election, Yablonski, his wife and daughter were murdered in their Clarksville, Pa., home. Boyle, who defeated Yablonski in the December, 1969 balloting, had the election overturned by another federal judge who rescheduled a second election for this December.

Boyle is also appealing a five-year prison term and the $180,000 in fines and reimbursement on his conviction of illegally funneling union money into political campaigns.

Judge Corcoran in June, 1970, declared Yablonski's bid for damages was moot. But Yablonski's two sons appealed and the decision was overturned by an appeals court and returned to Corcoran for disposition.

Inspection system clarified

HARRISBURG (UPI)—The Transportation Department (PennDot) Thursday issued a "Consumers' Guide to Automobile Inspection" to help take the mystery out of the state's inspection system.

"Pennsylvania has the best inspection system in the nation," Jacob Kassab, PennDot secretary, said, "but for too long Pennsylvanians have been kept in the dark on the workings of the system."

The guide tells motorists what is inspected on vehicles, what the standards are for passing, how to make sure you get what you pay for and how to avoid unnecessary repair bills.

Kassab said PennDot will also be instituting a program to certify the state's 80,000 inspection mechanics.

Guide to GOP protestors

By JAMES G. DRISCOLL
Dow Jones-Ottaway News

MIAMI BEACH — So you and Walter Cronkite greeted the dawn with a yawn during the Democratic Convention. So you struggled to keep awake in front of the TV as John Chancellor tried to explain why Sen. Mike Gravel was seconding his own nomination for vice president.

So it will get worse. At the Republican Convention, the yawns will start at the opening gavel. It will be well organized and dull inside the Convention Hall, with all the suspense of waiting for Richard Nixon to say "perfectly clear."

Outside the hall, however, protesters are promising a heavy scene. Lots of action. Maybe violence. Since TV cameras may focus extensively on those demonstrations, I thought I'd provide a guide to the protest groups so you can tell them apart. It's all part of our survival service.

— Hippies. A generic term meaning anyone with long hair, sandals, and a glazed look. Comparable to bohemians of the 1920s who lived in such iniquitous dens as Greenwich Village.

— Yuppies. A huge put-on turned semi-establishment. Yuppies Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin, considered too flaky by serious protesters, are writing a book about this year's two conventions. The publisher's advance payment enabled the Yuppies — formally, the Youth International Party — to lease a five-room carpeted office in a swank Miami Beach office building.

— Zippies think Yuppies are too conservative. In political terms, the two groups could be compared to the split-up Republican Party of 1912. Abbie Hoffman is like William Howard Taft, who stayed with the "regular" Republicans. The Zippies are like Theodore Roosevelt, who led the Bull Moose insurgents out the door.

— People's Coalition for Peace and Justice. Serious. Heavy. Full of deep anti-war symbolism. At the PCPJ, you'll find earnest young women in granny glasses who declare unequivocally that the whole system of U.S. society must be changed.

The most prominent PCPJers are Rennie Davis and David Dellinger, late of the Chicago Seven trial. Indeed, the PCPJ is the successor to the "New Mobilization" that more or less led the Chicago Demonstrations at the 1968

Democratic Convention. For the GOP this time, the PCPJ is planning a "gauntlet of shame;" protesters wearing death masks will form two lines at a spot where, they hope, Republican delegates will have to pass through to get to the hall. The point is "to show the evil of the Vietnam War."

TV cameras surely will record that episode. And then TV newsmen will interview the PCPJ spokeswoman, Shari Whitehead, who's better looking than Davis or Dellinger.

— Vietnam Veterans Against the War. Angry veterans, convinced that the Nixon Administration is out to do them in. Several of their leaders were hauled before a federal grand jury for allegedly planning violence at both conventions. Watch for confrontations between veterans and police.

— Students for a Democratic Society. The SDS, thought moribund by many protest watchers, was quite active at the Democratic Convention last month, leading 200 demonstrators who confronted George McGovern in a hotel lobby. SDS members, identifiable by their dark red t-shirts when they feel like wearing them, argue among themselves at length before deciding on an "action."

The SDS' more violent offshoot, known first as Weatherman and now as Wetherperson — no sexism permitted in bomb-making apparently — didn't surface during the Democratic meeting. If they do appear this month, Miami Beach may explode, literally.

— The Cubans. More than 50 separate Cuban groups exist in the Miami area. They are mostly anti-Castro "conservative" and enthusiastically oppose the leftist protesters. Possible violence.

— The Poor People's Coalition. This combines the National Welfare Rights Organization, the National Tenants Union, and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. They want, among other things, a guaranteed yearly income of $6,500 for a family of four, a demand guaranteed to raise the blood pressure of old-line Republicans.

— The GOP. Republicans aren't usually thought of as protesters, except for such mavericks as Harold Stassen, who isn't running for anything this year. Yet the Grand Old Party can protest vigorously when the status quo is threatened. So look for thunderous statements of outrage from a few of the more up-tight Republicans if pot smokers and nude swimmers are ignored by Miami Beach police during the convention.

Well, good luck with Cronkite, Chancellor, Harry Reasoner, and your other TV friends during the GOP Convention. If you begin to nod off occasionally, rouse yourself. Keep telling yourself that the convention is vitally important and it's your civic duty to watch and become informed.

Called good investment

Real estate trusts boom

CHICAGO (NFS) — The boom in the building market has made the man-in-the-street aware of the profits to be made in real estate.

But until recently, you had to have substantial amounts to invest to become an owner or even part owner of property.

Real estate investment trusts have changed all that. You can buy shares of these trusts, referred to as REITs, through a stock broker.

The trusts invest their money in short-term or long-term mortgage loans as well as equity participations in various types of properties.

The individual investor in turn benefits from relatively high yields of as much as seven to eight per cent.

"But before investing, investigate the management of the trust and its investment policies," advises John W. Baird, president and trustee of Baird & Warner Mortgage and Realty Investors, Chicago.

"One point to check is how experienced the trust's management and advisors are in all types of real estate," he said.

"Another is to check the secured nature of the trust's loans, especially the short-term construction loans. Risk can be minimized if permanent financing is lined up when the short-term loan ends."

Bill of fare stays stable

CHICAGO (NFS) — Whatever damage inflation may have done elsewhere, it hasn't affected the amount people spend in restaurants.

According to a survey conducted by the B. Brody Seating Company, Chicago, maker of restaurant dining furniture, typical meal checks are the same today as they were a year ago.

Breakfasts average $1.12; lunches, $1.70; and dinners, $3.95, according to two-thirds of the restaurants surveyed.

The remaining one-third of the dining places said checks have gone up from 8.5 to 10 per cent.

Economy home compact

By JOHN D. BLOODGOOD

Although modest in size, this home works efficiently.

Each of the three bedrooms has large closets, the master bedroom its own private half bath.

The dining area of the kitchen is in front of a sliding glass door.

In the comfortably generous living room, there is a handsome fireplace.

Minimal glass side faces neighbors; maximum views look toward the larger front and rear yards.

If you choose not to build a basement, you can rearrange the stair-closet space to hold laundry and mechanical equipment. Plans include 1 1/2-car garage.

Table-top sculptures in debut

CHICAGO (NFS) — Table-top sculpture is making its debut in a big way in 1972.

"Whether it's whimsy or the classics, you can get attractive sculptured pieces that will add an attractive note to an occasional table, mantel, bookshelf, or buffet," reports decorating consultant Mary Ann Willis.

For example, one company she advises has come out with a series of whimsical animal statuettes, all based on original sculptures.

Included are a goat, cat, bird, ram, owl, and llama, ranging from 10 to six and a half inches high, and available in a variety of finishes.

Included are a miniature replica of Venus de Milo, the head of Michelangelo's famous David, and a pair of art nouveau busts portraying a little boy and girl.

Home improvement plan

Solve your parking problems by building a garage. This simple design will blend well with almost any house. Redwood siding and trim make for easy care and long life. Roofing should blend with your home as closely as possible. The overhead door can be fitted with an automatic opener. At one side, the service door and a trash shed are combined under a projecting overhang. Inside, there is a rear storage rack over the hood of your car.

Well grounded

Campers should make sure that ground clothes under tents do not extend beyond the tent walls. A ground cloth that sticks out may collect rain water running down a wall, causing a puddle to form under the tent.

Ann Landers

'Dirty trick'

Dear Ann Landers:

My husband just handed me the newspaper and said, "Read this." I thought it would be your usual column saying something about how women should let their husbands run themselves bowlegged while the wife looks the other way. (This is what I call The Ann Landers Forgive-and-Forget Syndrome.) But it was even worse than that.

It quoted a New York doctor as saying, "Sex is not only here to stay but it will help you stay here longer." The nut then went on to praise sex as wonderful exercise for the heart, "also a fine tranquilizer." He said, "If a man is in good health, sex will help him stay well." The author didn't say what it would do for the woman who has done a big laundry, ironed nine shirts and chased after three kids all day.

In spite of all this gibberish about liberation, women are still enslaved and will remain so for biological reasons. It's a dirty trick, played on them by the Creator and nothing can change THAT. Sign me

—Pooped In Philadelphia

Dear Pooped in Philly: If you consider sex a "dirty trick" against women, I feel sorry for your husband — and sorrier for you.

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time you print letters from compulsive talkers — folks who hang on to the floor by connecting every sentence to the next with "and ... a ...". This can be frustrating for people who have to listen. Please tell me what to do about my aunt who comes to visit every August. She talks incessantly because she is hard of hearing. I do love her, Ann, but I swear she doesn't hear one-eighth of what is said. Don't suggest a hearing aid. She had a drawer full. She says they make her nervous. What should I do?

Uppa Crick

Dear Uppa: Nod periodically. Smile. Think about something else.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How To Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Pocono Record.

The Slim Gourmet

Easy diet chowders

By BARBARA GIBBONS

There seems to be a firmly held belief among cookbook writers that the Eastern seaboard is in civil strife on the clam chowder issue. Should it be made with tomatoes? Or potatoes and cream?

If you want to be a slim gourmet, I suggest you ignore the cookbooks altogether, since most cram their chowders with unneeded extra calories in the way of greasy slabs of pork fat or gloppy gobs of heavy cream. Those hidden fat calories add little to the flavor or texture of chowder, but, oh, what they do to your figure and complexion!

Canned chowders, on the other hand, are a calorie bargain, although their flavor is somewhat anemic. Canned Manhattan-style chowder (with tomatoes) is around 75 calories a cupful; the New England style (milk and potatoes) is around 130 calories a cupful, diluted according to directions.

Here are two Slim Gourmet chowders that are heavy on the clams but light on the calories ... and the effort. Both are made with canned minced clams.

Easy Manhattan Clam Chowder

- No. 2 can (20 ounces) minced clams
- can (16 ounces) tomatoes
- 3 1/2 cups water
- 1/2 teaspoon thyme
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch (optional)
- 1 cup thinly-sliced onions
- 1 cup minced celery
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Pinch of Pepper
- 1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
- 3 tablespoons bacon-flavored bits

- soda crackers, crumbled (optional)

In a three-quart pot, combine all ingredients except bacon bits and crackers. Stir well. Cover and simmer over low heat, stirring occasionally, until celery is tender. Pour into soup bowls and sprinkle with bacon bits and crumbled crackers. Makes 10 cups, 68 calories each with the crackers and bacon bits, 45 calories each without.

Easy New England Clam Chowder

- 2 teaspoons butter
- No. 2 can (20 ounces) Minced clams
- Pinch of pepper
- 2 potatoes diced
- 1 cup chopped onions
- 4 cups water
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 can (13 ounces) evaporated skim milk

Melt the butter in a non-stick saucepan. Add the onions and saute lightly. Drain the liquid from the canned clams and add to the saucepan, but reserve the clam meat. Add the water, salt, pepper and cornstarch and stir well. Add the potatoes. Cover the pot and cook over low heat 10 minutes. Uncover and add the evaporated milk and clam meat. Cook and stir until mixture simmers. Serve. Makes 10 cups,

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Seeing along the streets all the teenage girls with long, straight, shining tresses, I had thought "Well, that's an improvement over a headful of curlers which is all you used to see of their hair. And not to have to spend all that time putting their hair up probably leaves them plenty for other activities."

That's what I thought, in my ignorance. What I learned this week with a teen-age niece around is that, to the contrary, once they had got their hair up in curlers their hands were free for the rest of the day since, obviously, they never took them out.

Now, they never stop brushing. The brush in the hip pocket is as much a part of their jeans as the fringe around the bottom. In fact, in times of stress they may have a brush in each pocket.

What made it so noticeable this week is that the girl grandchildren, fascinated by anything a teen-age cousin does, were quick to follow suit, so that at any hour of the day you could see three Lorelei by the river bank, aged 15, 7 and 3, all brushing, their shining locks.

Very good for the scalp, no doubt, but very limiting as to mud pies, Barbies, and other activities and quite a switch from having to chase them

Cruising inland

LONDON (UPI) — Britain retains 2,500 miles of navigable inland waterways, mostly canals which are legacies from the 18th and 19th centuries.

Some 1,100 miles of canals are known as cruising waterways and are reserved for recreational use. There are still 340 miles of canals used for commercial purposes, mainly the movement of more than 6 million tons of cargo annually.

Bidding quiz

You are South, both sides vulnerable. The bidding has been:

North East South West

1♥ 2♣ ?

What would you bid now with each of the following four hands?

1. ♠AKJ8 ♥J5 ♦KJ762 ♣J3
2. ♠KQJ9763 ♥10 ♦A854 ♣7
3. ♠9842 ♥83 ♦AK9 ♣K982
4. ♠KQJ954 ♥872 ♦AJ73 ♣4

1. Two diamonds. This is a game-going hand, once partner opens the bidding, but the best contract is not yet apparent. Your intention at this time should be to describe your hand as accurately as possible, planning to let partner choose the final contract.

You intend to bid two spades over partner's expected rebid of two hearts, in which case partner will know that your spades are only four cards in length and that the diamonds are longer, since you bid them first. North will then be able to express his preference for either spades, hearts, diamonds or no-trump.

2. Four spades. You can't play this hand at less than game, and you clearly don't want to play it in any suit but spades. The leap directly to game denies interest in a slam. It indicates a hand worth seven or eight tricks offensively, but only about one trick defensively.

3. Double. With four probable tricks facing the three partner is likely to have for his opening bid, it is best to let the opponents play the hand, exacting a penalty for the privilege. There is no good reason for assuming you have a game your way of the table, for partner may well have only a minimum opening bid.

To bid two diamonds or two no-trump at this juncture might result in letting the opponents off the hook in a hand where there is only a part score in prospect.

4. Two hearts. Of course, the trump support is nothing to brag about, but the hand is simply too good for a pass, considering the 8 high-card points and the singleton club. It would be hard to justify a two spade bid, compelling partner to bid again and forcing your side into a high level. By bidding two hearts, which shows strictly limited upper and lower values, you allow the auction to come to an early end if partner has a minimum opening bid.

GOP convention holds little suspense

By TIM METZ
Ottaway News Service

MIAMI BEACH — The Republican National Convention coming up here next week promises to be a very different event from the one held here by the Democrats last month.

And the differences will be measurable by just about any yardstick you choose to apply.

The overpowering difference, of course, is that since the Republicans now occupy the White House, and since President Nixon has already chosen Spiro Agnew to run with him again this fall, there is no element of suspense in this year's GOP confab.

Perhaps the first tangible difference TV viewers will notice will be that the Miami Beach Convention Center will appear less crowded for the Republican Convention than it did for the Democratic sessions. That's because it will be less crowded.

The Republicans will seat 1,348 delegates and 1,348 alternates on the convention floor, compared with 3,103 delegates and 1,897 alternates seated there for last month's Democratic Convention.

(The total vote at the Republican convention will be 1,348, with 675 needed for nomination. The total Democratic vote was 3,016, with 1,509 needed for nomination. The greater number of Democratic delegates than total convention votes was caused by Democratic Convention rules that allowed for split or "fractional" votes. Republican rules prohibit fractional votes.)

And perceptive viewers will also notice a difference in the composition of Republican convention delegations from that of the Democrats. Long hair and bizarre attire are expected to be far less in evidence, due to the generally more traditional tastes and lifestyles of Republicans.

There will also be none of the seemingly interminable sessions that became a hallmark of the Democratic Convention. The Democrats' schedules fell victim to the sweeping reform in convention rules hammered out over the past four years in the aftermath of bitterness over the 1968 Chicago convention.

The rules under which next week's Republican Convention will be conducted were adopted Aug. 5, 1968. (The Convention rules being debated this week (week starting Aug. 13) in Miami Beach will apply to the party's 1976 national convention.)

Unlike the Democrats, who held one session daily for four days, the Republicans plan five convention sessions over three days this year. Monday and Tuesday, sessions are scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Wednesday's session, with speeches from President Nixon and Vice President Agnew as the order of business, will begin at 7:30 p.m.

A Republican National Committee spokesman in Washington said none of the five sessions will last more than three hours, for a maximum of 15 hours convention time.

Campaign '72

Ottaway news service feature

But internal Republican estimates call for even less convention time. A high ranking Connecticut Republican official told Ottaway News Service that he'd been told by Washington party officials to expect about 11 hours of convention time. The Democrats' second-day session alone ran longer than that; nearly 11 and a half hours.

Under Republican convention rules, nominating and other speeches are expected to be brief. Rule 11 states that "no member shall speak more than once upon the same question, or longer than five minutes, unless by leave of the Convention" except in making a nominating speech.

And Rule 16, which governs the length of nominating speeches, says that "the total time for the nominating speech and seconding speeches for any candidate for President shall not exceed twenty-five (25) minutes. The total time for the nominating speech and seconding speeches for any candidate for Vice President shall not exceed twenty (20) minutes."

There's also the likelihood of a unanimous nomination for President Nixon and Vice President Agnew. Under Rule 17, "when it appears at the close of the Roll Call that any candidate for the nomination for President or Vice President has received the majority of the votes entitled to be cast in the Convention, the Chairman of the Convention shall announce the question to be: 'Shall the nomination of the candidate be unanimous?'"

Pre-convention meetings of the party's Resolutions (platform), Credentials and Rules Committees are expected to produce little that is startling.

Pennsylvania's delegates prepared for demonstrators

By TIM METZ
Ottaway News Service

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Delegation to the Aug. 21-24 Republican National Convention will go to Miami Beach prepared to circumvent rumored obstructionist tactics by demonstrators, Clifford Jones, state GOP chairman, said in an interview.

"We were advised to make supplemental local transportation arrangements for the delegation in case the scheduled convention bus shuttle service breaks down in traffic jams caused by demonstrators," Jones said. "So we've gone ahead and leased three buses for exclusive use of our delegation," he said.

Jones said rumors from Republican sources in Miami Beach indicate anti-war and other demonstrators may be planning to block traffic along heavily-traveled Collins Avenue in Miami Beach, where most of the city's posh resort hotels are located. "That could be a nightmare for the shuttle buses, with all the stops they'll have to make," said Jones, who is serving as vice chairman of the delegation. (Sen. Hugh Scott is chairman).

Clogged up traffic along Collins Avenue would be an especially serious problem for the Pennsylvania delegation, since its hotel headquarters — the Diplomat — is located at the extreme northern end of Miami's resort complex, actually in Hollywood, more than 20 miles away from the Convention Center.

With its own buses, the Pennsylvania delegation will be in a position to avoid the Collins Avenue route to the Convention Center. "We can cross an extreme northern Causeway to Miami proper, travel the 20 miles south in the city, then cross a southern causeway back into Miami beach in the immediate area of the Convention Center," Jones said.

Apart from the prospect of running a demonstrator blockade, Jones allows there will likely be little excitement for the Pennsylvania delegation at the Convention. The Republican presidential ticket has already been set, and there's little statewide interest in the pre-convention deliberations of the Resolutions (Platform), Credentials and Rules Committee being held at Miami Beach this week (week starting Aug. 13).

In fact, the only state representatives on these pre-convention committees who have been given any instructions from state GOP leadership are Andrew Sardon III of Wilkes-Barre, and Mary Ann Arty of Delaware County — the state's two representatives on the Rules Committee.

The pair have been instructed to seek two specific rules changes, Jones said. The first involves a challenge by the Ripon Society — a liberal Republican group — to the GOP's method of allocating at-large delegate seats among the states.

About a year ago, the Ripon Society filed a lawsuit against the Republican National Committee asking that all at-large delegate seats be allocated in line with state population figures — in effect, that the "one man, one vote" concept be applied to choosing at-large delegates, just as it is with elected delegates.

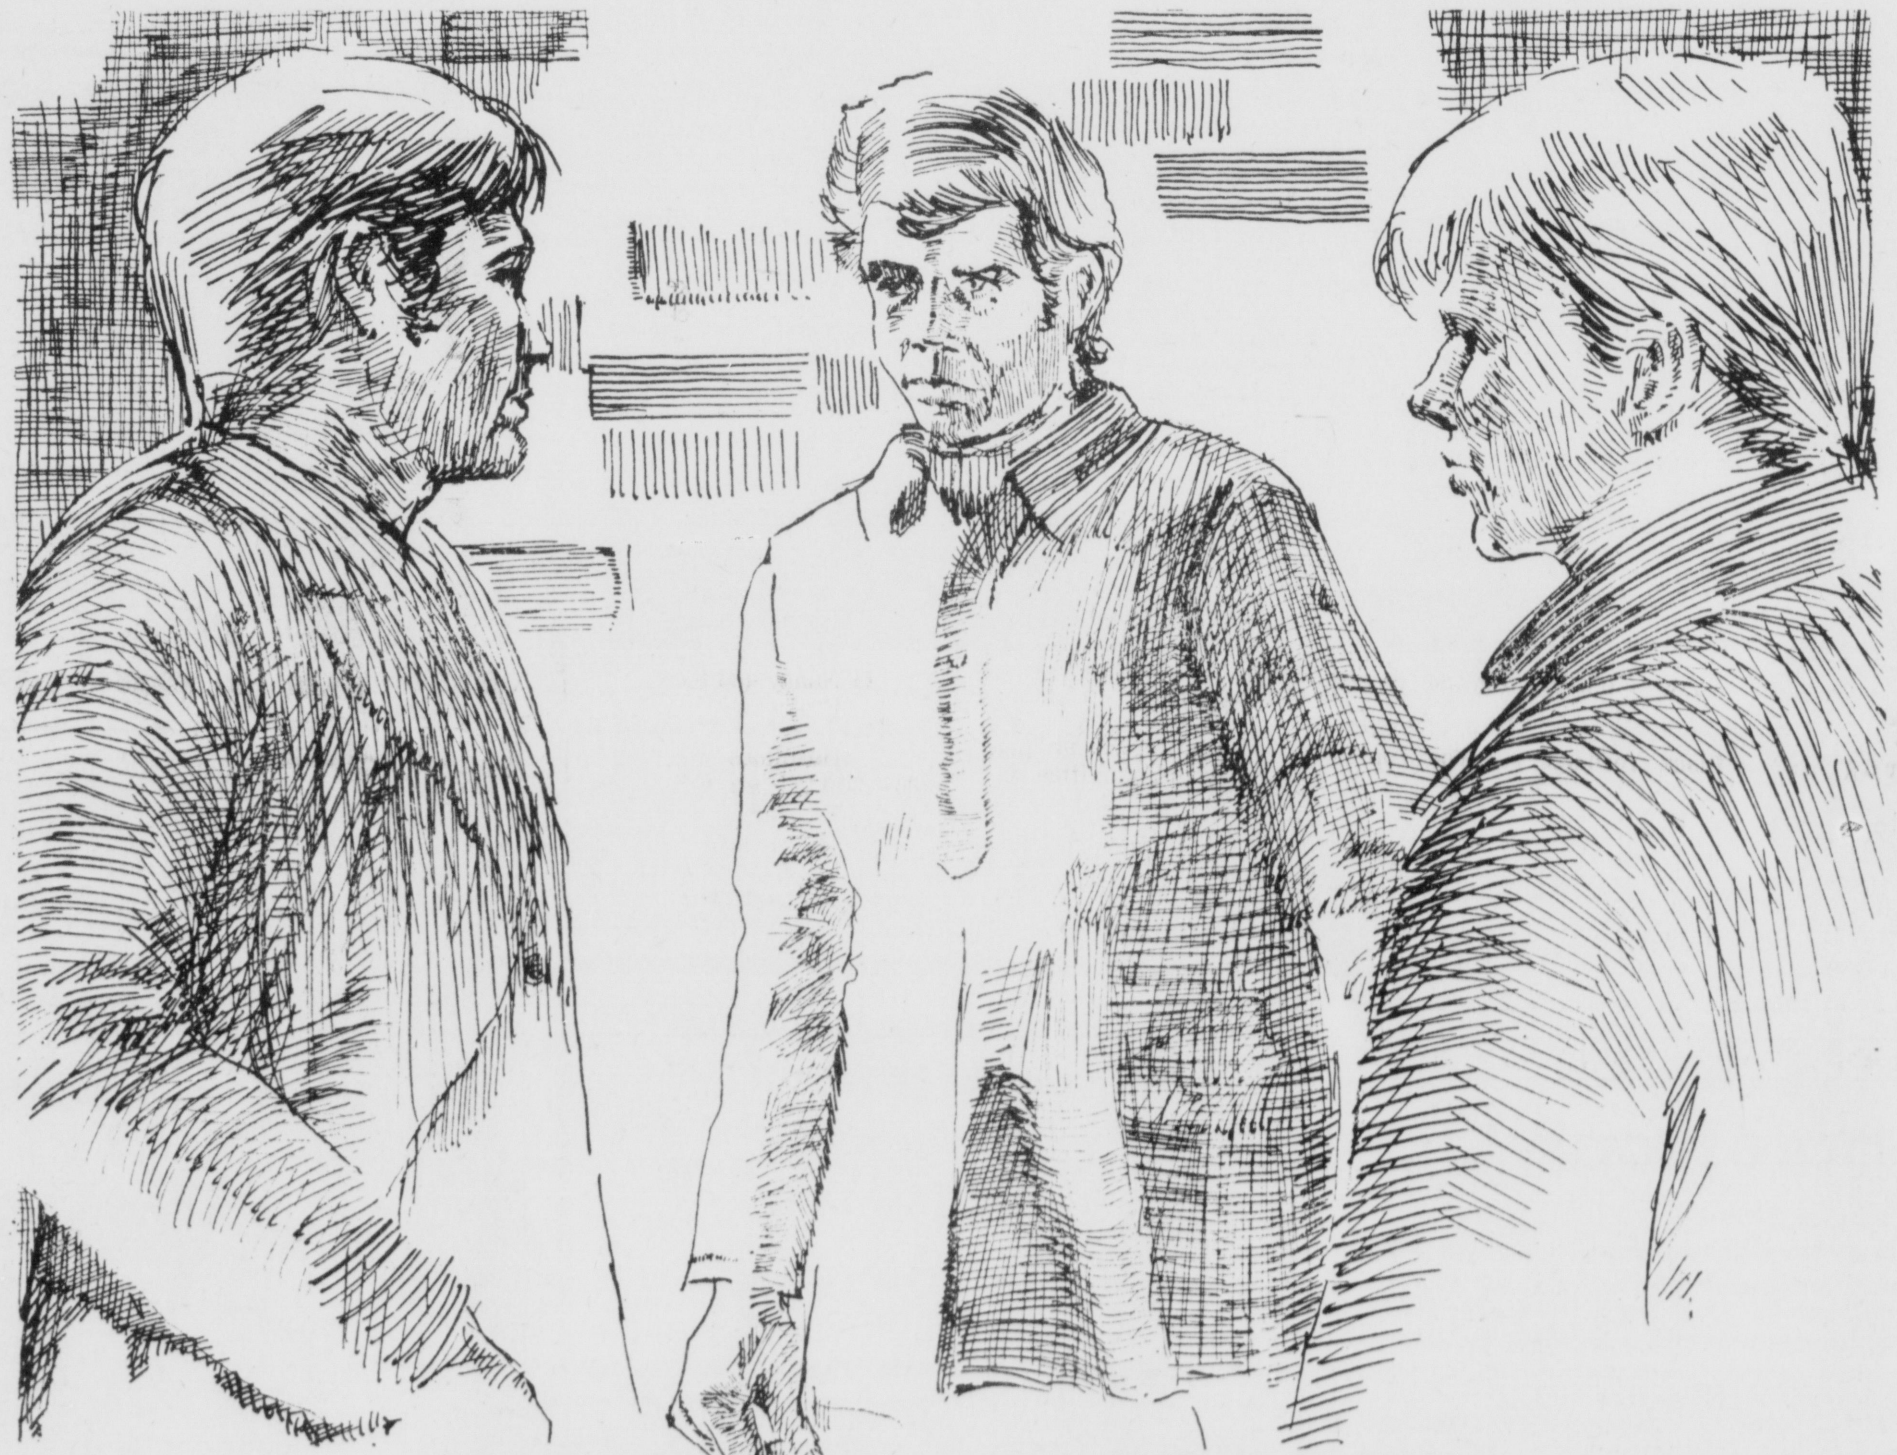

Present party rules — based on formulas involving the number of votes cast in each state for Republican presidential and congressional candidates — have the effect of granting smaller states a larger number of at-large seats at the convention than if straight population formulas were used as criteria.

Earlier this year, the Ripon Society agreed to withdraw its lawsuit in exchange for a full hearing of the at-large delegate issue at the pre-convention Rules Committee deliberations.

"We've instructed our Rules Committee representatives to seek a compromise solution to this issue which would cut down the number of but not eliminate, the at-large seats given to smaller states, with the resulting surplus to be distributed among the states based on population," Jones said. As the nation's third most populous state, Pennsylvania would stand to profit from such a redistribution.

In addition, Sardon and Mrs. Arty have been instructed to support a proposed party reform measure which would allocate the number of elected delegate seats equally between men and women, Jones said.

Maybe You Learned About Sex On the Street Corner—But Your Kid Had Better Learn The Facts About Drug Abuse From You!

As you may recall, many so-called "facts" about sex provided by your friends during your school days proved to be half-truths. Some had absolutely no basis in fact. More importantly, remember the curiosity aroused, the need to prove to yourself that what you heard was true, the pressure from friends to prove you knew as much and had experienced as much.

Now, picture your children or those of friends or associates. Pressures to belong, to be in, to achieve, to conform, are more intense than anything we could have imagined.

And there are still those "friends" with "facts". Today, the "facts" are about drug abuse and effects which can be anticipated. Many of the same half-truths and falsehoods exist.

It is about time we begin giving more than uninformed lip service to youthful drug use!

Start asking and listening. Public health professionals, law enforcement officials, educators, physicians, pharmacists and your children can help you understand.

Students rectify complaint

EAST STROUDSBURG — A television interference complaint at Avon Court, East Stroudsburg, was rectified this week by students at East Stroudsburg State College.

Residents of the complex registered a complaint with WESS-FM, the student-owned radio station on the college campus, noting that the station audio signal was overriding their television reception.

Students from the station investigated the complaint, and an FM television interference filter was installed without charge as a service to residents of the East Stroudsburg facility.

Other community residents who are troubled with television interference from the College radio station may call WESS at 421-9833. An investigation will then be arranged to help solve the problem.

The FM station is presently broadcasting from 5 to 11 p.m. daily. Broadcasting will be suspended Aug. 25, the final day of summer session at the college, and resume on Sept. 5, the opening day of the 1972-73 academic year.

Countains insured for $319,074,000

Special to the Record

STROUDSBURG — A sign of the times, for the average Monroe County family, is the extent to which it is protected against the financial hazards of daily living.

It has unemployment insurance, health insurance, accident insurance and life insurance, to mention the major ones.

And, on the long-range side, it has such other bulwarks as social security, private pension plans and personal savings.

With respect to its life insurance protection, it is more heavily covered at the present time than it has ever been.

One explanation for this lies in the fact that the economic position of most local families has improved, enabling them to broaden this form of protection and to put more money into their bank accounts and investments.

The result is that the capital amount of life insurance in force in Monroe County has climbed to an estimated total of $319,074,000.

The facts and figures on the distribution of insurance, nationally and by states, are presented in the latest Life Insurance Fact Book and in other reports.

They show that the lives of Americans are insured for a tremendous sum of money.

more than $1.5 trillion. And this does not include the substantial amount issued to veterans through the Federal government.

Pennsylvania State's share of this total is listed at $90,266,000,000, a big increase over the $44,429,000,000 reported ten years ago.

Just how much does this boil down to at the family level? The findings are that the average family in the state carries an amount of insurance that is equal to 25.3 months of its net earnings, after taxes.

Applied to Monroe County and to the average level of income prevailing in its area, ownership of life insurance comes to approximately $21,100 per family locally.

That is considerably more than in many sections of the country and is close to twice the amount held ten years ago.

Although ordinary life insurance continues to be the choice of most families, there has been a rapid rise in group insurance, which is usually job-connected.

Everything imaginable at Warren County Fair

By JOE MIEGOC
Pocono Record Reporter
HARMONY, N.J. — Everything you could imagine as being part of a county fair is here: 4-H exhibits; tractor-pulling contests; countless livestock exhibits; a coppercraft-making demonstration and selling area; game booths; animal sideshows; and jars of the old apple preserves "Grandma used to make."

It's all at the Warren County Fair, which is holding its annual get-together at Harmony Fairgrounds in this small New Jersey township two miles from Phillipsburg.

The fair runs through Sunday, when the farmers' crop auction and merchandise drawings bring the festivities to a close.

The New Jersey chapter of the 4-H organization has its exhibits in a large shed near the front entrance to the fair.

Here the group gives lectures each evening on ways to protect the environment and maintains a clothing booth where women's dresses made by members are sold to obtain funds for the group's use in making people aware of the importance of a good environment.

The Phillipsburg Area Jaycees sponsor many booths sprinkled around the fairgrounds, including the ever-present booth where for a quarter you get three chances at leveling a stack of bottles.

A Jaycee member manning one such booth explained that funds gained from the booths help defray expenses in other Jaycee projects in the Phillipsburg area.

Of course, there's a gypsy moth booth, where recorded programs explain to anyone who cares enough to pay attention the process of gypsy moth multiplication.

The booth, sponsored by the New Jersey Department of Agriculture, made literature on combatting the moths available to those who were having problems with the little darlings.

A coppercraft display booth included a demonstration on the constructing of a teapot from copper piecings. Coffeepots, serving pans and candlesticks were also on display.

In the same shed, another homemade jelly booth exhibiting jelly preserves and prize-winning crops attracted a large gathering. On display were onions larger than a man's fist, ears of corn, potatoes and large tomatoes.

Fishing licenses were available to anyone who had yet to renew a license for this season. The New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection sold the licenses and handed out literature imploring the preservation of clean streams in the state.

And then there were the animal freak shows. "Silver, the Horse with Six Feet," "Dolly, the Two-Headed Cow" and "The Cow with the Face of a Bulldog" were some of the names used to lure fairgoers behind a canvas curtain for a look at the beasts.

A woman on the inside of the tent explained that the two-headed cow actually saw out of its three eyes, breathed through both noses and could eat with either mouth. Yeah, sure it could! The cow picked up two mouthfuls of grass and downed them both!

Cows? Were there cows! Five long stalls were full of the animals, housing an estimated 125 cows in all. The animals were present at exhibition areas sponsored by various dairy farm operations from the Warren County area.

Pigs and sheep also enjoy attention, as do a few corals of horses. The animals stuck their heads out through the boards for food from passers-by, who ignore the "Do Not Feed" signs and slip a horse an apple.

The ever-present ferris wheel and pony rides were backed up as people waited in line to enjoy a skyward flip. Little children implored their parents for "one last ride" and got it, but not without a warning that it was the last one.

Fertilizer, animal manure create pollution problem

OTTAWA NEWS SERVICE
Washington Bureau
WASHINGTON — Russell Train, chairman of the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) said that water pollution by agricultural run-offs of fertilizer and animal wastes is a much more major part of the "national waste control picture than we had anticipated."

"The problem of nutrient concentrations is worsening in almost all water basins," Train told a hearing of the House Merchant Marines and Fisheries Committee.

Possible nutrient enrichment of the proposed Tocks Island Reservoir is a problem that has concerned the CEQ for over a year.

It has approved the Delaware River Basin Commission's concept of a regional sewage system to surround the proposed Tocks reservoir, but wants assurances from the Tocks Region governors that non-point sources of pollution — especially poultry wastes — will be treated.

CEQ approval of the Tocks project is considered to be contingent on such assurances, but so far none have been forthcoming.

The preliminary draft of the CEQ's study of the Delaware Basin notes that the Sullivan County poultry industry is the fifth largest in the nation, and that many farmers continue to spread chicken manure on the ground.

"Better controls are needed," the draft study concludes, but doesn't specify a solution.

The final text of the CEQ annual report says that both the House and Senate versions of a pending water pollution bill contain pollution abatement requirements for large livestock and poultry companies.

Sewer plan still long way off

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — Monroe County is still at least six months away from having an official sewer plan required by the Department of Environmental resources before sewer permits will be issued for certain subdivisions.

County Planning Administrator Douglas Williams said Thursday a special meeting of the planning commission should take another step toward providing that official plan.

A recent letter from DER's regional sanitarian Eugene Borofski outlined steps to be taken to qualify a comprehensive study as an official plan for the county's western townships.

That letter states the county should select one of four alternate means of sewerage the western townships contained in the comprehensive Weston Report for implementation.

Next, the county should indicate immediate needs for additional studies and time limits for completion of the studies.

In those townships where feasibility studies are completed, the letter continues, a schedule should be submitted showing the date of construction of the sewerage system and the date of its operation.

Once the steps have been carried through to the satisfaction of the state agency, the county may achieve approval of an official sewer plan.

Seeking consultants

Williams said the consultant firm the planning commission is now seeking will be charged with carrying out the steps outlined by the Department of Environmental Resources.

When the DER announced in March that sewer permits would go to only those areas covered by an official sewer plan, the state regulatory agency was using its power to issue permits as a means of forcing Monroe County to place sewers in developing land.

According to the federal Council on Environmental Quality, the home development industry enjoying a boom in Monroe County is shrouded in an "euphoric atmosphere of exaggerated promises, unrealistic expectations, public abdication and private avarice."

The council warned sales companies do not tell customers that long before all the lots in a subdivision could be built, "there might be a health crisis so severe as to preclude further consideration within the development and sharply diminish the attractiveness and values of completed homes."

Economy involved

The DER sewer permit ruling threatened to choke the economy of the county. No county subdivision regulations contain the stiff sewerage requirements being pressed by the state agency.

Faced with the dilemma of either permitting county approval of subdivisions in the face of state regulations or shutting down the lucrative industry, the county commissioners adopted a middle of the road position.

They directed the planning commission to continue approving developments based on county standards with the proviso developers inform land buyers they may not be able to build on their land until accommodation with the state regulations is worked out.

Williams said the planning commission has been proceeding on the basis of that directive.

He said, however, that the planning commission has no way of knowing whether developers are in fact warning customers of the undetermined sewerage situation.

Williams pointed out most lots are not built upon until five to 10 years after sale and the caution to land buyers is aimed at a certain few who wish to immediately begin putting up a home.

He said some means of checking on the use of the caution device will be worked out with the Planning Commission solicitor.

Collector sets hours for office

EAST STROUDSBURG — Mrs. Donna C. London, newly appointed collector of school taxes for the Borough of East Stroudsburg, Thursday announced her office hours.

For the week of Aug. 21 only, the East Stroudsburg School Tax Collection Office, to be temporarily located in the first floor of the Monroe Security Bank in the borough, will be open from 1 to 4 p.m., Monday, Aug. 21, Tuesday, Aug. 22 and Wednesday, Aug. 23.

Mrs. London said that beginning Wednesday, Aug. 30, the office will be open regularly from 1 to 4 p.m. every Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday.

She also announced that as of Tuesday, Aug. 22, the tax office will have a telephone. She requested that persons attempting to reach her not call Monroe Security Bank because that facility is not able to transfer calls or give out information.

She said residents could call 421-3692 (on and after Aug. 22) during the open hours of the tax office for information.

She said all checks should be made payable to Donna C. London, Tax Collector. All mail should be addressed to: Tax Collector, P.O. Box 302, East Stroudsburg, Pa. 18301.

Stroudsburg qualifies for insurance

WASHINGTON — Citizens living in the Borough of Stroudsburg are now qualified for federally subsidized flood insurance, the Department of Housing and Urban Development announced Thursday.

They became qualified when the borough agreed to adopt control measures that will minimize the risk of flood damage to future construction in the area, HUD said.

The announcement was made through the office of Rep. Fred B. Rooney (D-Bethlehem).

Beginning Aug. 25, all public and private structures in the borough will be eligible for the insurance, including structures used for residential, commercial, agricultural, religious and governmental purposes.

Temporary storage unit may aid waste problem

STROUDSBURG — Edward Hess Associates of Stroudsburg has developed what the firm believes to be an answer to the economic problem of providing central sewerage for the booming land development industry in the Poconos.

A primary criticism of the second home land developments has centered around the problem of giving property owners state approved sewage disposal systems.

The recent vigorous enforcement of the state Sewage Facilities Act, banning on-lot disposal in certain situations has highlighted the problem.

Conditions which make land attractive for recreation and second home communities at the same time present a problem for on-lot sewerage. Where soil conditions mitigate against the installation of septic systems, economics mitigate against immediate central sewerage.

Land sales generally run ahead of actual home building, making it economically unfeasible to construct a central sewerage treatment plant with pipe lines to homesites or potential homesites.

William Hopkins of Edward Hess Associates, said the pace of home development and the $10 to $13 cost per running foot of placing sewer pipes in developments means an interim solution should be developed to make sewerage economically possible for subdivisions.

A technique being employed by the Hess firm would allow central sewerage to take place gradually until home density in subdivisions makes full central sewer treatment a better proposition.

The technique used involves the installation of "holding tanks" where soil tests have determined septic tanks are not possible.

Hopkins said the holding tanks are similar to septic tanks, but do not drain automatically into the surrounding area.

Attached to a home, the holding tank collects sewage until a certain level is reached in the tank. At that point, an alarm goes off in the home, indicating the holding tank should be emptied.

From there a tank truck is brought in to remove the waste from the holding tank for transport to a treatment plant in the development.

Essentially, the system works like "pipes on wheels", Hopkins said.

As home building increases the density of a section of the development, costs of laying pipes is reduced. At a certain density of home construction determined by costs and engineering feasibility, the pipes are put in to automatically collect the sewerage for the treatment plant.

Hess Associates has used the system in three developments in the Poconos. Hopkins said the system has the additional advantage of avoiding decay in pipes laid to collect sewage where sparse development has taken place.

Without continuous use of collection pipes or enough pressure to keep a flow in the system deterioration could result.

The interim solution of holding tanks appears to be the solution to the sewer problems facing land developers. Hopkins said it may not be the best solution for all developments, but it has worked in three communities so far.

Stroudsburg adopts new plan

School suspensions gone

By BRUCE POSTEN
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — The Stroudsburg Area School Board has hired James Haffey to be in charge of a "social restoration" program that will replace disciplinary suspensions at the high school level.

Students who would have been normally suspended for school infractions such as smoking in the lavatories, persistent absenteeism or unlawful skipping of classes will instead be required to remain on school property under the direction of Haffey.

Haffey, a graduate of Lehigh University, participated in a social restoration program at Lehigh under the direction of Dr. Raymond Bell. He is qualified to teach English, mathematics and history.

At Stroudsburg High School, Haffey will supervise the study programs for students with disciplinary problems and receive a salary of $8,000.

According to Karl H. Dickl, assistant principal, the new program will be geared "to the student who is behaviorally maladjusted and has deep seated family, social or personal problems."

Dickl, who originally presented the program to the school board last February, believes it will be very beneficial and rehabilitative.

In a description of the social restoration program Dickl pointed out the new system will be of a tutorial nature. He listed six concepts that social restoration will entail:

— Students assigned to the center for three days (the normal suspension period) will bring with them their assignments and the necessary books and materials to complete the assignments.

— Students assigned to the center are denied participation in all extra-curricular activities during the period of their suspension.

— The teacher in charge will attempt to restore the students attitudes and behavior so that he can return to the school environment.

Teachers support discipline plan

STROUDSBURG — A random survey of teachers at Stroudsburg Area High School showed strong support for a new "social restoration" program that would eliminate suspensions for student disciplinary problems.

The new system will require students formerly eligible for suspension to remain on school property in a controlled situation.

Teachers will continue their classroom studies with a teacher monitoring their activities. Guidance counseling also will be made available to help restore the student to a normal school environment.

Teacher response to the new program was generally favorable with many instructors feeling the social restoration system would be a definite improvement over suspensions.

George Bushta, a business education and typing teacher, said, "I am definitely in favor of the overall program. Under the old suspension system if a student were suspended he may not have the supervision at home, which might lead to greater problems."

Reading teacher, Donna Haddon, felt the program is "infinitely better than anything we have done so far."

She noted many students worked for suspensions as a

— The teacher may call upon parents, guidance counselors, court officials or school personnel to help restore the student to the normal school environment.

— The teacher must maintain a serious and business-like atmosphere in the center.

— The maximum allowable numbers of students in the center at any one time shall be 15.

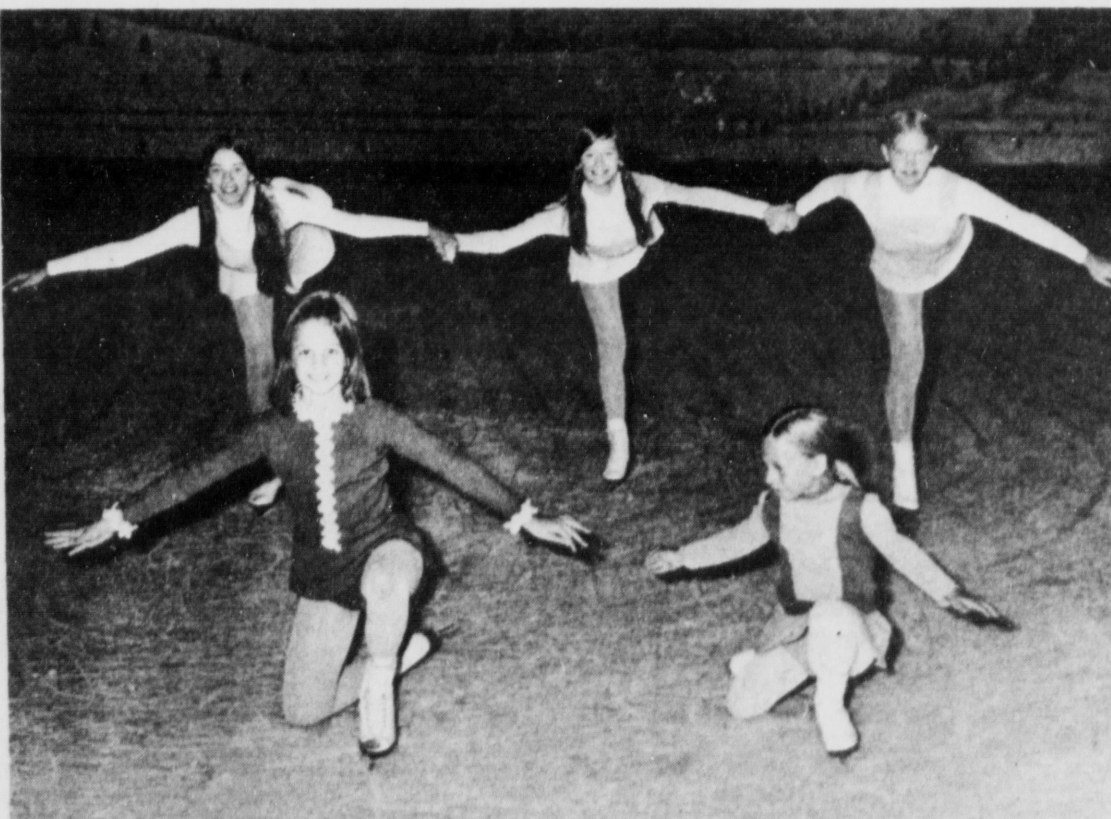

vacation, but said, "it remains to be seen how the new program is going to work."

Fred Ross, football coach and science teacher, said, "I think this experiment is a step in the right direction. To send a boy or girl home for a three-day vacation doesn't have much effect."

Senior Social Science teacher Ira Nagler voiced opposition to the program stating, "Segregating behavioral problems will not be an answer. All it will do will be to aggravate whatever disinclination and dislikes students already have toward the school."

"What is required is a total rehabilitation program which probably includes the family and an enlarged guidance counseling service," he said. Edward L. Burnett, English and journalism teacher, expressed support for the program and said, "The administration is trying to do something about a serious problem and perhaps this is the answer."

John Meixell, another English teacher, summed up the program saying, "It makes more sense than having students running all over town. I wholly support the in-school suspension as long as some kind of purposeful work is involved."

Greenville duo freed in armed robbery

STROUDSBURG — District Magistrate Graden Praetorius has dismissed armed robbery charges against two Greenville men after the plaintiffs, two youths from Massachusetts, failed to appear in Monroe County to press charges.

Ricky Pettis, 21, and David DeGregorio, 18, were set free after being arrested Aug. 3 by Pennsylvania State Police for allegedly taking $10 from Gary Groser, a hitchhiker the two Pennsylvania men picked up in New Jersey.

Groser and a companion, Robert Phillips, were picked up on Route 46 in New Jersey by the duo and then allegedly robbed at knife-point somewhere in the Stroudsburg area on Interstate 80 West.

After being left along the highway, the Massachusetts youths notified the state police who in turn radioed a description of the auto and its occupants to all patrol cars.

The vehicle was spotted by a team of troopers from the Hazleton Troop S barracks and the men were stopped and returned to Stroudsburg.

Groser and Phillips identified the two men and said they would return to Stroudsburg for the hearing to pursue the charges against them.

After being postponed once because the boys failed to appear, charges were dropped against the Greenville men who had been detained in the Monroe County Jail since their arrest.

BALTIMORE (UPI)—Shortstop Luis Alvarado and Pat Kelly both cracked a pair of doubles and drove in two runs each Thursday afternoon as the Chicago White Sox crept within a half-game of the American League Western Division lead by dumping the Baltimore Orioles, 6-1. Alvarado's two-run single and Kelly's two-run double in the sixth inning supplied all the firepower as Chicago unloaded on starter Pat Dobson and reliever Roric Harrison.

The White Sox scored single runs in the second and fifth innings. Singles by Ed Spiezio, Alvarado and starting pitcher Dave Lemonds gave Chicago a 1-0 lead in the second and the Pale Hose made it 2-0 in the fifth on a two-out double by Kelly and a single by Mike Andrews. Baltimore, which dropped its third game in a row, scored its only run in the seventh inning on a double by Don Baylor and a single by pinchhitter Tom Shopay.

Sacrifice fly, McGraw keys to Mets win over Atlanta

NEW YORK (UPI) — Ed Kranepool's sacrifice fly in the eighth inning and the clutch relief pitching of Tug McGraw in the ninth Thursday afternoon led the New York Mets to a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Kranepool drove in rookie second baseman Lute Barnes with the winning run when he lofted an opposite-field fly to medium left off starter and loser Ron Reed. Barnes had opened the inning with a line-drive double to the left field corner and advanced as Wayne Garrett grounded out.

The Mets took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Agee doubled in Garrett. Atlanta evened the score at 1-1 in the fourth on a single by Breazeale and a double by Baker, his first of three hits.

The win was the 14th for Seaver against nine defeats. Reed is now 10-12.

McGraw relieved winner Tom Seaver with one out in the ninth inning after Jim Breazeale singled and Dusty Baker doubled. The southpaw relief ace issued an intentional walk to pinchhitter Henry Aaron, then set down the next two batters on infield outs to gain his 18th save.

12 nations serve notice

Sympathy walkout discounted

MUNICH (UPI) — Twelve African countries have threatened to withdraw from the Olympic Games over the issue of Rhodesia, but several United States coaches discounted Thursday the likelihood that black Americans would walk out in sympathy.

"I think it's a pity that any country would allow its athletes to work so hard and then use them as tools," said Hoover Wright, a black U.S. track and field coach from Prairie View. "As far as I'm concerned, it's a shame that politics has to get involved."

Two other assistant coaches to the track and field team, Bill McClure of South Carolina and Stan Wright of Sacramento State University, said they had heard talk among their charges of forsaking their chance to compete in the Olympics, which get underway Aug. 26.

"I haven't heard anything of a walkout," said Stan Wright, also a black, when asked about published reports that black Americans might support the African movement. "I won't preclude or second guess whatever any individual wants to do, but right now it sounds ridiculous."

Earlier in the day, Willie Daume, President of the Olympic Organizing Committee, listed 12 nations that have served notice they'll withdraw their teams if Rhodesia is allowed to participate.

"The only official withdrawal so far is Ethiopia," said Daume. "They followed the correct procedure by informing us through their National Olympic Committee."

"Tanzania, Sierre Leone, Liberia, Uganda and Mali have communicated their views through their embassies or consulates, while we have heard via newspaper reports about the intentions of Sudan, Somali, Zambia, Kenya, Nigeria and Ghana."

Art Lentz, Executive Director of the Olympic Committee, said the withdrawal of these nations "was unnecessarily hurting some very fine athletes. It's a shame that we can't run these Games without any overtones of politics."

Asked the policy of the U.S.O.C. if any American athlete refused to compete, Lentz said, "if any individual who felt that way we'd permit him to go home, but we're certainly not going to pull our team."

Lentz added that he had heard no talk on this matter among the U.S. athletes.

Hoover Wright said that he felt if any walkout ever occurred on the part of the Americans, "It would be by all Americans, not just the blacks. We're trying to present a united front and do away with separatism."

Wright said that he had discussed this topic only once with one American runner, whom he later identified as Lee Evans.

"An article was called to our attention while we were in Oslo in which someone in my group was quoted on this matter," he said. "I had a discussion with him about it and he couldn't even remember saying it for publication. It could have been something he just threw off while talking off the cuff.

"I certainly don't think the American public has any reason to fear a surprise attack from our guys."

Except for a handful of equestrian competitors, members of the men's track and field team compose virtually all of the 40 U.S. athletes currently in the Olympic Village. Light workouts have been going on this week, and these three coaches expressed satisfaction with the local conditions and the chances for the team.

Pappas, Cubs defeat Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Jose Cardenal clouted his 13th homer of the season Thursday to give Milt Pappas and the Chicago Cubs a 2-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Cardenal's two-run blast came in the third inning off loser Jim Barr, 4-7. Willie McCovey's ninth homer of the season in the seventh accounted for the Giants' only run.

The loss kept San Francisco from tying Atlanta for fourth place in the National League West.

Pappas, who had to leave the game in the eighth inning because of a muscle spasm in his back, won his ninth game in 16 decisions. Relief ace Jack Aker came on to strike out Chris Speier with the tying run on second base and preserved the win to pick up his 11th save.

Zapiec claimed by Dolphins

MIAMI (UPI)—The Miami Dolphins, nagged by a series of preseason injuries, picked three players off the National Football League waiver list Thursday and gained a fourth as the result of an earlier trade.

From the waiver list, the Dolphins acquired linebacker Chuck Zapiec, a Penn State rookie, from Dallas; safety Tom Curtis, formerly of Baltimore, from Los Angeles; and a defensive end Julian Nunamaker from Buffalo.

The Dolphins also announced that offensive lineman Howard Kindig had arrived in camp for a tryout. Rights to Kindig were obtained earlier in the week as an "afterthought" in a trade that sent defensive end Frank Cornish to Buffalo for a future draft choice.

Kindig had decided to retire before the Dolphins acquired rights to him. Earlier it had been reported he had decided to stay retired, but he changed his mind and returned Thursday.

Head coach Don Shula also announced that young linebacker Dennis Coleman has been waived and has an opportunity to play in the Canadian Football League. Shula said Coleman—who had been waived by the Dolphins, picked up by New England, waived there and picked up again by the Dolphins—was waived this time on his own request.

Shula also announced his starting lineup for Saturday night's game at Cincinnati. In the backfield will be quarterback Bob Griese and running backs Larry Csonka and Mercury Morris with Marlin Briscoe and Paul Warfield at wideouts.

The defensive front four, which has been hit hardest by injuries, will have ends Bill Stanfill and Vern Den Herder and tackles Manny Fernandez and Jim Dunaway.

Gen Brook combines two golf tournaments

In the nine hole weekly tournament Doris Ferrara was the winner. Bette McCambridge had low gross; Evelyn Hanke, low net for class "A"; Jan Schleman for class "B"; while Bette McCambridge also had low putts.

In the championship flight of the annual tournament Betty Ahnert defeated Betty Bixler and will meet Bert Diehl, who won over Ida Bescker, next Thursday. Peg Gould who won her match with Henri Reaser will meet Maryann Higgins, who defeated Ann Bedrosian.

In the first flight, Judy Berry, who won her match with Oriole Nitrauer, will meet June Katz, who defeated Daisy Pomeroy. Lynn Talbot, winner of the match with Lillian Nietsch, will meet Ann Larson, who won over Bert Snyder.

Second flight matches were won by Helen Haynes over Vi Schafer and will meet Nan Dimity, who won over Helen Zaccaro. Elaine Martin, who won her match with Irene Rothstein, will play Kitty Lee, winner over Eleanor Wise.

In class "C", the largest class of competitors, four matches will have to be played to determine the winner. In next week's second match, Harriet Mader, who won her match with Thelma Mesko, will meet Bobby Westbrook, who drew a first round bye.

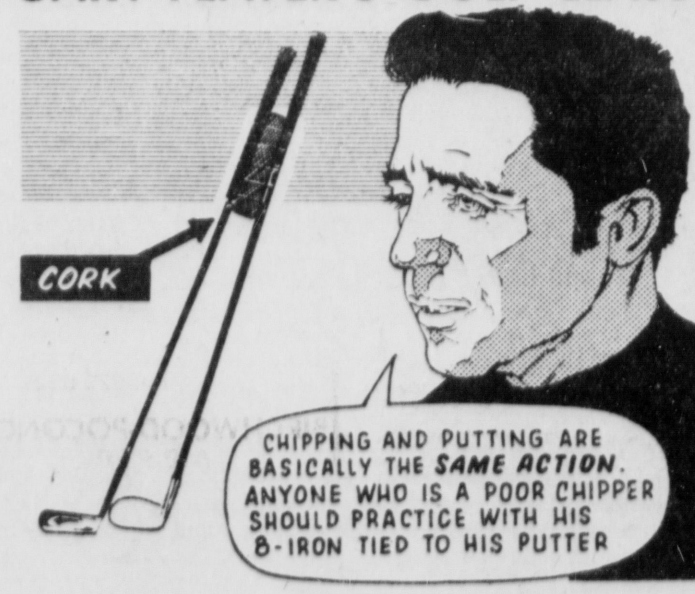

Loretta Gravatt, winner of her match with Alice Tunney, will meet Betty Lorenzet, who drew a bye; and Millie Larsen, winner over Jo Croft, will play Lucy Viechnicki, who also drew a bye. Kay Tarr, winner over Marilyn Kessler, will play Ann Altomose, who had also drawn a bye.

There will also be a consolation round with losers in the first round playing each other.

Dow Jones - Ottaway News Service

CHICAGO — Along with the expected benefits, the big grain deal with

Russia may deliver a couple of surprise punches to U.S. consumers and taxpayers.

— Bread prices could go up.

Wholemeal flour prices already are rising dizzily, and if they stay up the big bakers say they will be forced to ask the Price Commission for permission to boost retail prices by a cent or two a loaf.

— The government would have to shell out many millions of dollars in export subsidies to move the grain to Russia.

The Soviet Union is buying wheat

here at prices generally prevalent

throughout the rest of the world, while wheat prices in the U.S. are climbing to much higher levels because of the increased demand caused by the sales to Russia. The government subsidizes exporters to make up for the difference.

On the positive side, of course, selling at least $750 million of wheat, corn and other grains to the Soviet Union over the next three years will be a welcomed boost for the lagging U.S.

balance of payments.

The deal will benefit the U.S.

economy, too, with boons for those handling the grain — farmers, elevator

operators, railroads, truckers, barge

lines, exporters, longshoremen and ship owners.

There is no indication yet how the positive and negative repercussions will balance out. In the long run, argue Nixon Administration officials, the U.S. stands to gain not only economically but in reduced international tensions as well. The benefits of relaxing the often-strained relations with Russia are incalculable, Administration men assert.

The dollars-and-cents impact can't be pinned down now for another reason — the Russians might end up buying more grain than originally anticipated because of bad harvests in the Soviet Union and throughout Eastern Europe. When the deal was announced July 8, the $750 million was supposed to be spent largely on corn and other grains to feed Russian livestock.

So far, though, the Soviets have been concentrating on buying wheat. If other grains are purchased in the amounts predicted a month ago, trade sources say the three-year deal could total $1 billion.

The Russians aren't saying what their plans are, and U.S. exporters with whom they are doing business are even more secretive. Since July 8, $127 million of wheat for export to Russia has been registered with the government's Export Marketing Service, a procedure necessary to qualify for some of the $500 million credit that the U.S. is extending Russia. That $127 million will buy about $2 million bushels.

However, sources in the grain trade say that much more wheat has been bought by Russia for cash; most of this wheat is the hard red type used mainly for bread-making. Some sources figure that Russia could buy 350 million to 400 million bushels of U.S. wheat this year alone.

Such bullish reports have spurred one of the sharpest climbs in wheat prices on record. Ordinary hard red winter wheat hit a peak last week in Kansas City of $1.86 a bushel, the highest in five years and up 35 cents from the day before the Russian deal was announced.

Wheat futures trading on the Kansas City Board of Trade is setting records, and during a recent three-day period a speculator could have turned a $1,000 profit on a $500 investment on a single futures contract for 500 bushels.

Since Aug. 1, the New York wholesale price of 100-pound sacks of flour has increased to $7.44 from $6.57. The big baking companies, which normally are in the market at this time of year contracting for about a six months' supply, have been buying only enough to keep operating on a day-to-day basis.

"It looks as if we missed the bus this year," sighs one southwestern baker, who figures he could have saved 60 cents to 90 cents on each 100 pounds if he'd bought his supplies three weeks ago.

Bread, cookie and cracker bakers say they'll be forced to raise prices sometime this fall unless the wheat and flour prices lose some of their gains.

Rising wheat prices are taking their toll on Uncle Sam's purse strings, too. A month ago, when the wheat prices here and throughout the rest of the world were so close that the U.S. government had to subsidize exports from Gulf of Mexico ports by only two cents a bushel. Now, mostly because of the Russian purchases, the Gulf Port subsidy has swelled to 36 cents a bushel.

One day in mid-July, when the subsidy had risen to about 15 cents, a record 77 million bushels of wheat were registered for export and covered by subsidies totaling $11.5 million. Since the Russian grain deal was announced, export subsidies have been granted for some 200 million bushels of wheat (not all of it for Russia.)

On the other hand, the government might save as much as $100 million on wheat subsidy payments to farmers because of the rise in the market price. The subsidy program for U.S. wheat farmers is very complex, but basically as the market rises the subsidies decline. The government previously estimated its subsidies to wheat farmers this year would be $890 million.

Millers and bakers contend the subsidy to exporters is helping push wheat prices higher than they should be, and they are asking the government to lower that subsidy or suspend it. The Agriculture Department can do this, but hasn't given any indication that it will.

Wheat buyers also are unhappy that the government isn't unloading enough of its wheat stocks — which now amount to some 300 million bushels from surplus production in recent years — in an effort to stem the wheat price spiral.

Market prices have risen far above the trigger level at which the government can sell the grain it acquired from farmers as part of its price-support program, but the government has chosen to sell at the higher market price instead of the "trigger" price. In the past two weeks, the government has sold more than 50 million bushels of wheat.

Enthusiasts of the Russian grain deal say the benefits to the economy will more than offset these unforeseen or at least unmentioned costs to the public.

"It's going to start right at the farm, where the little guys with maybe 5,000 bushels to sell are getting the best price in years," says a vice president of a grains export firm.

The government figures that every million tons of grain exported creates 3,000 to 5,000 jobs in the U.S. Among the first to benefit are the grain handling and transportation industries, which are directly involved in gathering the wheat and other grains from across the country and moving it to the ports.

Because of the Russian orders, the total U.S. wheat exports to all customers in the year ending next June 30 could be a record in billion bushels.

If so, and if domestic use is 805 million bushels as predicted, surplus U.S. wheat stocks held by this government and others on June 30, 1972, could be cut by a whopping 200 million bushels to about 620 million bushels, the smallest surplus in several years.

American Peace talk uncertainty causes decline in market

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market suffered its third consecutive setback Thursday

as investors went to the sidelines to rest on recent gains. Trading on the New York Stock Exchange was dull.

The Dow Jones average of 30 selected blue-chip industrials, which reached a 44-month high Monday, lost 2.86 to 961.39. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index eased 0.32 to 111.34. The average price of a New York Stock Exchange common share decreased by eight cents.

Declines edged advances, 714 to 658, among the 1,730 issues crossing the tape. Turnover totaled 14,360,000 shares, compared with 14,950,000 traded Wednesday.

"The market has run out of steam since it made its big gain," said Monte Gordon, analyst for Sartorius & Co., noting the Dow gained almost 21 points last Friday and Monday. "It doesn't know which way to go right now. I think it's going to take some news development to get it started again."

Some analysts, noting the market was higher at the outset, said it moved lower after Communist delegates to the Paris peace talks said no progress had been made in other secret talks with presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger who now is in Saigon.

Leo Lancer, analyst for Bruns & Nordman, said the market "is acting normally. I think it's still healthy. This was just a dull session." Lancer and Gordon both noted investors are switching from glamor stocks to others, particularly oils.

TWA was the most active issue, down 1 1/2 at 48 1/2 on 236,900 shares. A major brokerage house has revised downward its projected earnings for the airline.

How do you make them?

Tire firms 'bet' it out

By RALPH E. WINTER

Dow Jones — Ottaway News Service

AKRON — The big tire-makers are at each other's throats again, this time over how to make a tire.

It's not a question of keeping the shape round, but it's almost as basic: Should the cords that form the tough body of a tire run diagonally from one side to the other, as they have in the U.S., or should they run straight across, as they do in Europe?

Special moments?

Some moments in your married life are special.

Last night as we readied for bed, my husband and I looked at one another lovingly and said, "Well, today marks 23 years of married life together."

"The ratings have been good. I think I'll renew for another 23," he chided.

"Where do you think up expressions like that?" I glowed. "You are really funny. I mean it. I tell the girls some of the things you say and the way you say them and they like to die laughing. I guess your sense of humor is one of the things that has made our marriage so successful."

"And your patience," he cautioned. "Don't forget that. Without it, we'd never have survived."

"Oh c'mon," I said jostling him in the ribs with my elbow. "I don't have patience. It's give and take. Like my always getting the side of the bed next to the wall. I've never minded that."

"Then why did you mention it?"

"Mention what?"

"Always having to sleep next to the wall. If you wanted to sleep on the outside, why didn't you say so?"

"And have you stomp over me to go to the bathroom to clean your throat all night long?"

"I do not stomp in and out of the bathroom all night long. At least I don't lie in bed and smack my lips and snore."

"That is a barefaced lie," I said. "I have never snored in my life."

"How would you know when you are asleep?"

"It's funny you should mention sleep. Because that's what you are always doing when I am up taking care of our sick children by myself."

"Ho ho. You oughta send that one to Reader's Digest. If you stopped snoring before 10 a.m., the entire neighborhood would call Crime Stop and say, 'Check the Bombecks. Erma has stopped snoring. There's something wrong there.' And speaking of wigs, I hate that wig that doesn't match your eyebrows."

"And I hate the way everytime we go out to dinner, you have to stop at the supermarket and cash a check."

"And I hate that crummy, black cookie sheet that you could replace for 98 cents. It's a good thing I have a sense of humor."

"And you never take your shorts out of your trousers before you drop them in the clothes hamper and I hate it when you cut your toenails in the living room. Lucky for you I have patience."

We were silent for a moment.

"Happy anniversary. I'll take the wall tonight."

"No," I sighed. "It might fall in and I'd feel guilty."

"Golly, we picked a BEAUTIFUL day for the beach... I see Hobie, Larry, Donald, Rick, Wally, Dennis, Arnie, Scott..."
